Senate Unit Opens Way For Inquiry Into Crime

Racketeers Invade Stock Markets, Brewster Asserts In Speech on Floor

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate Rules Committee yesterday opened the way for a $50,000 Senate investigation of interstate gambling rackets and "tygoons" of the crime world.

Charges made only yesterday that crime syndicates are operating in the stock markets may also figure in the inquiry.

The Kefauver resolution, authorizing a "full and complete" investigation of organized crime, was cleared by the Rules group with a stipulation that results of the inquiry be reported to the Senate by July 31.

Additional Sum Possible

The $100,000 requested by the Senate Judiciary Committee to make the investigation was cut in half, but the Senate customarily grants additional amounts when an inquiry shows "progress."

Cleared up in the process was a jurisdictional tangle over what Senate committee should conduct the inquiry. Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, who had questioned the right of the Judiciary group to make the study, said last night he will not challenge its jurisdiction when the resolution goes to the Senate for approval.

Johnson said he still reserved the right, however, to ask the Rules group for another $50,000 "if I need it" to make a separate investigation of any antiracketeering legislation referred to his committee.

Claimed Right to Act

Johnson has contended from the start that his committee will have to pass on any crime legislation of an interstate character. He said he expects antiracket legislation being prepared by the Justice Department to be sent to Congress before April 15.

A speech on the Senate floor by Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), charging that crime syndicates "have been able to make excessive profits in the market by the use of illegal methods and manipulating stock prices" opened the possibility of further broadening the inquiry.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), sponsor of the resolution, who under Senate practice will head the investigation, said he had heard the reports of stock market manipulation. He said his committee would have to decide whether to look into it.

Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.), directed by the Rules group to report the resolution to the Senate, said the investigation would cover these five points:

"1. The adequacy and effectiveness of present Federal statutes relative to crimes involving interstate commerce.

"2. The extensiveness of the

Suspended Police Chief Nabs Councilman in Numbers Raid

A house owned by a Bladensburg town councilman was raided by police yesterday afternoon—not 24 hours after the chief raider, Policeman Henry J. Nebel, was suspended by the council.

As a result of the raid, Councilman Josias A. Cobb was booked on a gaming charge at the Hyattsville Police Station. Two men in the house owned by him also were charged.

Nebel was Bladensburg police chief until he was demoted by council last week under a department "reorganization" plan.

Neither the demotion nor the suspension was learned until after the raid. Nebel said he had not been informed of the suspension when he staged it. Councilmen would not disclose the reason for suspension.

Cobb, who lives at 4112 46th st., Bladensburg, said he did not know of any gaming activities in the raided house, next door to him at 4114 46th st.

The two men arrested in the house were:

Ollie Holland, 50, who rents the house from Cobb. Holland was charged with operating and maintaining a lottery. He was released under $1000 bond.

Clyde R. Wilkinson, 27, of 4412 46th st., Bladensburg. Wilkinson, charged with possession of numbers slips, was released under $200 bond.

Cobb was charged with permitting a lottery on his premises. He was released under $100 bond. The 57-year-old councilman, owner of a garage, surrendered voluntarily when he heard a warrant had been sworn for his arrest.

Cobb's only comment

Senators Quiz Two Key Police Investigators

Senators made a new Washington police mystery yesterday with a three-hour super-secret quizzing of two key Metropolitan Police investigators.

The policemen were Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, and Detective Sergt. James K. Hunter, who heads the special investigations squad assigned to the probing of subversive activities.

Hunter is acting head of the squad with the rank of acting lieutenant, in place of Lieut. Harry Blackman who was assigned January 1 to a six-month tour of night duty.

The two men were haled into an unannounced closed-door hearing of the Senate subcommittee that handles the District appropriation.

It was done upon the demand of Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Neb.), minority floor leader in the Senate and a member of the District funds subcommittee.

Presumably on Wherry's request, Subcommittee Chairman Lister Hill (D., Ala.) swore all persons in the meeting to strict secrecy.

Lieutenant Blick was first to leave the meeting, and later refused comment.

Sergeant Hunter left the meeting last, and said he had been summoned to the special meeting by a subpena.

Senators Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) and Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) who attended, refused to discuss the subject matter of the inquiry.

Official shorthand reporters were present to take down the testimony, it was said.

Wherry said he did not think the hearing would affect the District appropriation bill. He would not say why he wanted the hearing held.

The hearing was ordered to resume at 2:30 p. m. today.

In telling about his being subpenaed, Sergeant Hunt told reporters that the committee was not making an investigation of him.

Laborites Win Confidence Test By Biggest Edge

London, March 23 (U.P.).—The Labor government tonight mustered its biggest majority since the elections in defeating, by 288 to 240, a Conservative motion of no-confidence in Food Minister Maurice Webb.

The no-confidence motion was introduced in the House of Commons because Webb refused to state the amount of food he has stockpiled.

The Tory motion was to reduce the Ministry of Food budget for next year by 100 pounds ($280)—a formal method of indicating lack of confidence in a Minister. Had it carried, Webb probably would have resigned.

2 Bandits Halt Kann Co. Truck, Escape With $6500 Payroll

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

Two bandits, in a well-planned holdup, yesterday robbed two employes of S. Kann Sons Co. of a $6500 payroll.

The Kann employes, George M. Langley, 53, delivery manager, and James Kidwell, 58, truck driver, were nearing the warehouse at Delaware ave. and C st. sw., when their company truck was blockaded by the holdup men shortly after 11 a. m.

The bandits were waiting in a stolen car, parked out in the middle of C street just before it crosses Delaware ave., police said. Kidwell, coming east on C st., had to stop the truck behind the car, they said.

The two men jumped out of the car and came up to the truck, one of them pointing a .38-caliber blue steel revolver.

"Give us your guns," one of the men ordered. When Langley and Kidwell said they had no guns, the bandits then demanded the money they had with them.

Langley told police he handed over a cardboard box, containing the money, which was in pay envelopes and destined for the warehouse employes. He said neither he nor Kidwell was forced to get out of the truck.

As soon as they were given the box, the two bandits jumped in the car and drove north on Delaware ave. Langley and Kidwell immediately crossed the street and

Truman Plan Altering T-H Act Favored

NLRB's Members Cite 'Confusion' Over Powers Given Its General Counsel

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 12 was given the green light by the House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments at a closed session last night.

The vote was 18 to 7, strictly on a party basis. Two of the majority Democrats, Representative William P. Bolton (D., Md.) and Representative Herbert C. Bonner (D., N. C.), reserved the right to vote against the plan when the issue comes up on the floor of the House early next week.

Reorganization Plan No. 12 would abolish the independent office of general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board and transfer the functions of the general counsel to the five-man board.

Hoffman Asks Rejection

The committee vote was on a resolution, introduced by Representative Clare E. Hoffman, (R., Mich.), which would block the reorganization plan from becoming effective.

The committee went into executive session last night after three days of public hearings on the resolution.

Proponents of the reorganization plan contended that it would end confusion over authority in the NLRB, now divided between the general counsel and the board. Foes of the plan argued that the plan is a device for the Administration to get rid of General Counsel Robert Denham, who has been under attack by the labor unions for alleged pro-employer bias.

Under terms of the reorganization act, the plan automatically goes into operation in 60 days unless specifically rejected by either chamber of Congress with the vote of a constitutional majority. That means it would require 218 votes for the House to stop Plan 12.

Minority and Majority Views

The committee majority will file its report sometime Saturday. A minority report will also be submitted to the House.

The Administration insisted yesterday that neither the Taft-Hartley Act nor personalities were involved in Reorganization Plan No. 12. Like 15 other reorganization plans submitted by the President, Administration spokesmen said, Plan No. 12 is aimed at decreasing confusion and increasing efficiency.

Testimony of Pace

Frank Pace, jr., director of the Budget Bureau, hinted that the President could perhaps resolve the continuous conflict between the general counsel and the board by exercising his powers of removal, but, he said, the President was concerned with making a "fundamental and lasting" remedy under the authority of the Reorganization Act.

Under the Taft-Hartley Act, the

Capitalites To Cast Vote On Fast Time

D. C. Heads Order 100,000 Ballots For Informal Poll In Lieu of Hearing

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The voteless District will have a chance to vote in a week or two—on the issue of daylight saving time.

In anticipation of congressional action authorizing them to put the District on fast time this summer, the commissioners yesterday decided to poll public opinion via the informal ballot.

Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, announced 100,000 ballots have been ordered which will allow persons to indicate whether they favor, oppose or aren't concerned about daylight saving time.

Ballots at Stations

It is planned to distribute the ballots to police and fire stations and perhaps some places of public assembly, Stofberg stated.

The vote will be in the nature of an advisory referendum, Stofberg said. The Commissioners will not necessarily be bound by its outcome.

Daylight-saving time across the Nation usually extends from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in September. It involves setting the clock ahead an hour—thus providing an hour more of light at the end of the office worker's day.

Farmers, however, don't like fast time because they can't change their schedules so easily. It has been largely for this reason that Congressmen from rural areas have made the District daylight-saving time bill so controversial each year.

For the past three years the District has adopted daylight-saving time. The Commissioners acted after a public hearing in 1947. None was held in 1948 or 1949.

Once Was Approved

Two polls conducted by The Washington Post in 1947 showed about two-thirds of the persons responding favored fast time.

But the Commissioners have received a number of letters on both sides of the subject already this year, Stofberg said, and accordingly decided to test public feeling.

Stofberg said John Russell Young proposed the referendum as better than a hearing.

He did not indicate how out-of-towners will be stopped from voting or repeaters prevented from casting a ballot in every precinct.

As in past years, two different daylight-saving time bills have been introduced in the Senate and House. The Senate has before it a bill approved by its District Committee which would turn over to the Commissioners permanent authority to decide on fast time here.

A House bill, which may be discussed at a District Committee meeting April 3, would authorize the Commissioners to proclaim it this year only.

Hospital Probe Ordered

Jury Deadlocked in Theft Of Gallinger 'Wonder' Drugs

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The jury deliberating the case of the theft of "wonder drugs" from Gallinger Hospital was sent home at 9 o'clock last night to resume its deliberations today.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough sent the jury home after being told by Jury Foreman Leo J. Bechtold that the jury was not near a decision after three hours' consideration of the case.

The District Court jury received the drug theft case against James W. Kinard, 35-year-old Gallinger Hospital pharmacist's aide, at 4:35 p. m.

After 90 minutes of deliberation, the jury ate dinner and returned at 7:10 p. m. to request further information on the defendant's testimony.

The jury asked what Kinard's response was to the question, "Why had he three vials of chloromycetin upon his person?" Judge Goldsborough told them that the defendant first said he got them for his own use and later said he had taken them out for hospital use.

Shortly before 9 p. m., the jurors returned and told Judge Goldsborough, through Foreman Bechtold that agreement on a verdict was doubtful.

The judge said: "The court thinks you ought to be able to agree in this case."

Judge Goldsborough, learning that hotel accommodations were unavailable, sent the jurors home, with the admonition to "read no newspapers nor listen to the radio."

Kinard is charged with the theft of 500 vials of streptomycin and of three vials of chloromycetin from Gallinger.

Initially a drab trial, the proceedings had developed into a virtual indictment of record-keeping at the municipal hospital main storeroom.

Even Hospital Superintendent Philip A. Stebbing conceded that the records were "Greek" to him.

Meanwhile, the District launched two investigations into matters brought out at the trial. District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger ordered an investigation into procedures for handling supplies at the hospital.

And Commissioner John Russell Young asked Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett for a report on hints during the trial that hospital officials hampered police investigation of the case.

In final arguments, both defense and prosecution shouted that data was being "hidden" in the case. Kinard, who is still employed at the hospital despite a prior criminal record and the present indictment, insists that he had nothing to do with the alleged theft.

Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin said of Dr.

$61,098,000 Planned for Area

$665 Million Public Works Projects May be Okayed Today

Final authorization of 665 million dollars worth of military public works projects—$61,098,000 in the District, Maryland and Virginia—may be voted today by the House Armed Services Committee.

The bill under consideration involves Army, Navy and Air Force construction projects throughout the country. The committee's approval would not appropriate the money, but would authorize future construction.

The omnibus appropriations bill now pending in the House carries 300 million dollars for such military installations. Its approval would provide enough money for many of the major projects.

Of the 665 million dollars total which has been under committee consideration for weeks, $3,205,000 is proposed for the District, $40,373,500 for Virginia and $17,519,500 for Maryland.

Certain classified projects with unspecified locations would cost several additional millions.

Proposed for the District is a laboratory at the Naval Research Laboratory in Anacostia, to cost $1,570,000.

One project alloted to Virginia, but in the Washington area, is a building extension in Arlington Hall, costing $94,000.

Other Virginia projects include: Fort Belvoir — communications building, $118,000.

Camp Lee—quarters, $3,135,000.

Vint Hill Farms — quarters, $759,000.

Quantico Marine Base — quarters, $2,476,000.

Chincoteague Naval Ordnance Test Station—quarters and guided missile range, $1,511,500.

McCarthy's View Differs

'Top Red Agent' Left U. S. Job 5 Years Ago, Tydings Asserts

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator McCarthy's "top Red espionage agent," allegedly "connected with the State Department," was not connected with it very closely, or even recently.

His one connection, it was disclosed yesterday, was five years ago, for a period of four months, when he was associated with a State Department mission outside of the United States.

Thereafter, one day he publicly addressed a group of State Department employes, and at another time participated in a two-day "Citizens' Round Table Conference" in the Department, with a number of other "distinguished Americans" who were called in for the event. He was not employed or compensated by the Department on these occasions.

The revelation that the "spy," if he was a spy, was operating via pretty remote control from the State Department was made by Senator Tydings (D., Md.). Tydings heads a special Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating McCarthy's charges. Tydings said the information was furnished to him by the State Department at his request.

The Wisconsin Republican told Tydings' group, in closed session last Tuesday, the name of the individual he said was the principal Soviet espionage agent in this country, and said he was connected with the State Department.

He said repeatedly he would "stake his case"—charges of Communist leanings against about 115 individuals—on this one "key"

Acheson Trip Abroad in May Reported Set

NYHT News Service

Secretary of State Dean Acheson plans to visit Europe early in May, it was learned yesterday, to discuss nonmilitary methods of strengthening the Atlantic Pact nations against the Soviet Union.

Acheson, it was reported, will preside at a meeting of the Atlantic Pact Council, which will engage in a general review of common objectives of the pact members outside the military field, and of means of advancing those objectives under the Atlantic Treaty.

The council is made up of foreign ministers of the 12 pact nations, and is the highest-ranking body under the treaty organization. It has met previously only to rubber-stamp organizational agreements. Members expect full discussion of political and economic problems at the coming meeting. Their diplomatic representatives here, in the next few weeks, will draw up an agenda for the session, and agree on a place and specific date.

London has been suggested. Acheson at the same time plans to meet with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France in another of their series of three sessions, principally this time on the subjects of Southeast Asia and Germany.

The Atlantic Council meeting will follow—but will not otherwise be closely connected with—a series of Atantic Pact military meetings scheduled to begin today at The Hague. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, left by air today to take part in these sessions, and Defense Secretary Louis Johnson is scheduled to leave Tuesday.

The military meetings will include sessions of four treaty bodies; the Military Production and Supply Board, which deals with arms; the American-British-French standing group, which immediately directs defense plans; the 12-nation military committee, which supervises military matters, and the 12-nation defense committee.

Portuguese Thrill At 'Marvelous' U. S. Potatoes

By the United Press

Portuguese housewives have gone into raptures over those "marvelous" surplus potatoes Uncle Sam is dumping abroad for 1 cent per 100 pounds.

The Agriculture Department got a first-hand account yesterday from the commercial attache at Lisbon.

He wrote that housewives were standing in line to buy the potatoes at the government's ceiling price, about 2.5 cents per pound.

At one grocery store, he said, the conversation went like this:

"Never have we seen such marvelous potatoes!"

Customer Walks Off With Drugstore Receipts

Some unscrupulous customer at a Peoples drugstore, 1119 F st., nw., made himself $70.81 last night merely by walking in—and walking out—of the store, police were told.

Miss Allie Gaines, a cashier, reported sadly she counted that sum out of the day's receipts and placed it in a plain envelope on a drug counter.

And that, police were told, was the last of the money.

New York, March 23 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover today accepted the chairmanship of the citizens' advisory committee of the Health Information Foundation.

The foundation was organized last month to gather and make public data on national and local health facilities.

U. S. Arrests Illegal Refugee To Prod Remedy by Congress

New York, March 23 (NYHT).—In a test case to pry remedial action from Congress, Vintila Bratianu, 35-year-old son of a former Prime Minister of Romania, his wife and two daughters were arrested today for deportation to Romania, where he has been sentenced by the Reds to life imprisonment at hard labor.

But the arrest was tempered with mercy from Watson B. Miller, United States Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization. He appeared personally at the formality and told the bewildered family they may consider the expulsion procedure a "bookkeeping matter."

"Unless I am forced, you will not be sent back to Romania," he said.

Under existing laws, he said, they must be deported. He said the Bratianu case would be processed up to the point of actual expulsion to provide a complete, technical record that can serve as the basis for Congressional action to help these people.

The commissioner indicated he expected a special law might be enacted for the family, or better still, that Congress will pass a law to give relief to all such deserving persons—or, best of all, that Congress will give the commissioner himself discretionary power to settle these difficult problems.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) has introduced a private bill in the Senate to give relief to the Bratianu family, with the understanding it would be held in abeyance pending enactment of a new D.P. law.

U.S. Forces Too Weak, Eisenhower Declares

Four Peace Points Slated by General; Weakness in Face Of Threat 'Criminal'

New York, March 23 (AP). Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said tonight America has slashed her armaments below the danger point in a world that has not yet attained true peace.

At the same time, the former Allied Supreme Commander set forth his own four-point program for achieving a world settlement that is better than that "other peace that is something of an armed truce."

"We know the formula of success," he said.

"First—justice, freedom and opportunity for all men.

"Second—International understanding.

"Third—Disarmament.

Weakness Is "Criminal"

But until true peace is attained, the soldier-president of Columbia University declared that weakness in the face of Soviet strength is "well-nigh as criminal as war itself."

Eisenhower's address, a major one, was prepared for a Columbia series dedicated to international peace.

"America," he said, "has already disarmed to the extent—in some directions even beyond the extent—that I, with deep concern for her present safety, could possibly advise, until we have certain knowledge that all nations are doing likewise. . . .

"Only by deliberate lies can the propagandist—foreign or domestic—stretch our arms program into more than the reasonable posture for defense which George Washington urged on his countrymen.

"And the heads of state everywhere, even the most suspicious and fearful, know that it is below even that level."

Plainly referring to Russia, Eisenhower declared that when even one power "builds and maintains a military machine beyond the recognized needs of reasonable security, a war of aggression remains a constant threat to peaceful nations."

The former Supreme Allied Commander cautioned against "a tendency to write off our friends in the Western nations because they are weak in numbers and weapons."

This country, Eisenhower said, must be able to help its allies as well as defend itself.

Only America, he said, can lead the way to peace. And America can do nothing, he declared, unless she is strong.

3 Silver Spring Children at Play Bitten by Dog

The neighborhood around St. Bernadette's School, 10003 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, was searched yesterday for a large black and white dog, which bit three children as they played on the school playground.

The youngsters, Joseph Landis, 9, of 9922 Pembroke dr.; Arthur Callahan, 7, of Carson st., and Paul Fineran, 13, of 305 Edgewood ave., were treated by private doctors. Each was bitten on the leg, during lunch recess.

School authorities, fearing the dog might be rabid, conducted their own search besides notifying police.

The dog was described as being predominantly white with black spots. It had a noticeable limp, the boys said.

Senate's Farm Bloc Split on Cotton Bill

Annual 'Take'

Restaurant Tips Put at $2 Billions

MRS. IMOGENE WRIGHT
Speaks for fellow workers

An expert on the subject told Congress yesterday that tipping waiters and waitresses is a two-billion-dollar-a-year business. Then she added a tip:

The waiters and waitresses might be reluctant to report the money for Social Security purposes for fear the income tax collector might find out.

The witness was Mrs. Imogene Wright, author of the "Handbook for Waitresses"—a guide to better service and bigger and better tips. She testified before the Senate Finance Committee on a bill to expand the Federal Social Security program, including waiters and waitresses.

She estimated there are about three million waiters and waitresses in 525,000 public eating places in this country. She figured they average $2.75 a day in tips—a total of $8,250,000. She said each works about 280 days a year—making the total $2,310,000,000.

Mrs. Wright said she favors social security for her fellow workers but she was a little suspicious of the idea. She said it might be a "red herring" dreamed up by the Collector of Internal Revenue to find out just how much waitresses earn.

She suggested the possibility that tipping be abolished. A flat minimum wage should be substituted, she said, and a flat 10 or 15 percent added to each diner's check.

Mrs. Wright was the last witness on the last day of the committee's hearings, which have been in progress since January 17.

Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) said the committee should have the bill ready for the full Senate in about three weeks.

Senator Russell B. Long (D., La.) said the Federal Government should give aid to the needy who are disabled and cannot earn a living.

4-Day Limit Sought On Bread and Water

The Senate and House were at odds yesterday over how long a military prisoner should be kept on bread and water.

The discrepancy turned up in the separate versions of a military justice bill passed by each chamber.

The measure is designed to provide a uniform code of military law for the armed services. In it, the House proposed cutting to five days the present one-week limit for the military bread and water diet. The Senate suggested three days.

A Senate-House conference committee probably will heed the advice of Representative Cole (R., N. Y.): four days.

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The bipartisan Senate farm bloc, which has survived droughts, floods, depressions and changes of administration, split down the middle yesterday over a measure to increase acreage for two Southern-grown, price-supported crops.

The result last night was still in doubt. It will depend upon which side is able to marshal the most converts overnight.

After passing a Conference Committee bill to permit increases in cotton and peanut plantings this year, 37 to 33, the Senate almost immediately reversed itself 37 to 35. The last vote was on a motion to table a motion to reconsider.

Before the opponents could follow through with their suddenly acquired majority, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) moved to recess until today. The motion was highballed through by Vice President Barkley.

The split was two ways. First, it was almost a straight party action. Only three Republicans first voted to pass the bill. Only five Democrats voted against it. On the second vote only two Republicans, Donnell (Mo.) and Millikin (Colo.) voted to clinch passage. Only three Democrats, Benton (Conn.), Douglas (Ill.) and Lehman (N. Y.) voted the other way.

The voting also split between the North and the South, and, to an extent, between city and country. Northern wheat and potato farmers, angered because they had lost efforts to get a bigger acreage for their crops, voted against peanuts and cotton.

The conferees had dropped wheat from the measure. Wheat Senators had got a provision increasing wheat plantings up to 4½ million acres in the original Senate bill. The conferees also had stiffened restrictions on potato farmers, providing that all price protection for them be dropped next year unless a law putting spuds under strict Government regimentation be adopted and put into force.

The debate was noisy and at times threatening. After the vote to pass the bill had been overturned, Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) lashed out at opponents. He laid the defeat to "misstatements" about its cost. He "regretted that the vote was along party lines." He called the action "cut-throat legislative tactics" and promised there "will be others who will now show they know how to play this game."

"Talk about peanut farmers and peanut politicians if you will," he shouted, "the vote against this bill was from Senators championing a commodity (potatoes) that has cost the Government more than all the rest.

"This may be the beginning of the end of all farm programs," Russell asserted.

Russell's expressed fear that the farm program is in danger because of revelations of its cost, was not the first during the day. The same warning had been sounded earlier by Senators George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) and John J. Williams (R., Del.) and others. It had also been heard in the House, which had passed the same bill earlier in the day, and then had turned to action on a bill to give the Commodity Credit Corporation two billion dollars more to support farm prices. (CCC has about used up a previous allotment of 4750 million dollars.) The CCC bill was adopted and sent to the Senate.

The debate brought out some startling disclosures. Senator Aiken, the minority Agriculture leader, asserted that price supports will cost a billion dollars this year. He confirmed a recent story in The Washington Post that supports cost 600 million dollars in the crop year ending June 30, although the figure was buried under lend-lease credits carried over from wartime.

This tremendous cost, he said does not include "losses to the taxpayer in the expenses of other agencies, that were required to bail out CCC."

The measure, Aiken said, would single out potatoes as the only commodity not entitled to price supports next year.

Aiken was particularly bitter towards peanuts. He asserted that the Armed Services and the Economic Cooperation Administration had been "required" to take peanut oil and peanuts for crushing in Europe at the expense of lard, cottonseed and soybean oil.

The loss last year for peanuts, he said, actually was more than 70 million dollars instead of one-third that amount as reported in CCC financial statements.

One minor dispute arose over the tally of the vote of Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.). Tydings originally voted against the bill, and then asked instead, to be listed as "present." Just after his name was called on the second roll call, he left the chamber.

The clerk listed him as voting against the proposal. Anderson protested. Efforts to call Tydings back were fruitless, so he continued to be listed against the bill on a recapitulation. The effort to table the bill, however, nevertheless would have failed by one vote.

Other neighboring Senators voted as follows: Byrd and Robertson of Virginia, both for the bill. O'Conor (Md.), absent. Williams (Del.) opposed it. Frear (Del.) paired against.

The District Commissioners adopted a resolution yesterday calling for more school holidays.

Most likely it won't amount to anything, though. They were Junior Commissioners who stopped by the District Building to meet their older counterparts as part of the annual National Boys Club Week festivities.

After this vote-catching action, the boys set off on a tour of their domain. It included inspecting the fire department, police department and jail; lunch at the Touchdown Club, meeting Senator Mathew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) on Capitol Hill and a free show at Loew's Capitol Theater.

The three boys, elected from the Boys Club of Washington, were Robert Colbert, 16, of 3425 East Capitol st.; Alan Drew, 17, of 1406 Massachusetts ave. se., and Wayne Smallwood, 10, of 336 14th st. ne.

Wholesale Onions Drop 6 Cents To 44 Cents a 50-Pound Sack

Chicago, March 23 (U.P.) — The onion market dropped almost out of sight today, promising lower prices for the Nation's housewives.

The price of March onions on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange skidded to 44 cents for a 50-pound sack, down 6 cents from yesterday's all-time low. Only last September onion futures were $5.05 a sack.

Railroads declared an embargo on incoming shipments here as 348 freight cars loaded with unwanted onions jammed sidings. Traders said that within a few days housewives should be paying 2 or 3 cents a pound for onions, instead of the present 5 to 8 cents a pound.

On another price front, meanwhile, the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. announced lower butter prices in what it said was a reflection of wholesale price drops. The grocery chain reduced top grade butter from 67 to 65 cents a pound and said cuts on other grades were proportionate.

The collapsing onion market, Mercantile Exchange officials said, was caused simply by "too many onions." They said good weather late last summer produced a bumper crop, much of which went into storage. Growers now are trying to unload because of a big new crop expected from Texas in about two weeks.

There are no Government price controls or supports on onions.

Gain of 926,000 Pupils By Next Fall Expected

The Office of Education estimated yesterday that elementary school enrollments will increase next fall by about 926,200.

Total enrollment in kindergarten and through the eighth grade is expected to be 23,686,000, compared with 22,759,800 this year.

House Will Debate Foreign Aid Bill Today

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Major measures of American foreign policy will be at stake in the House today when debate begins on a huge "single-package" foreign aid bill.

The bill authorizes funds for the third year of the Marshall Plan, the first year of the Point Four program of technical help, continuing economic aid in the Far East and relief for Arab refugees.

An economy bloc of undetermined size is out to slash the Marshall Plan funds and kill the Point Four authorization of 45 million dollars. But Administration leaders professed confidence they could beat down the attacks.

Farm Groups Oppose Tieup

Supporting their confidence was a letter from the leaders of the four biggest farmers' organizations opposing any attempt to tie the Marshall Plan to the disposal of farm surpluses. The bill already carries a proposal approved by the Foreign Affairs Committee, to substitute a billion dollars worth of farm surpluses for the same amount of cash in the coming fiscal year.

Signers of the letter, addressed to members of Congress, were Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; James G. Patton, president National Farmers Union; John H. Davis, executive secretary, National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, and A. S. Goss, master of the National Grange.

They opposed the food-for-cash amendment for four reasons (1) it was contrary to the spirit of Eurpoean Recovery Program; (2) it would involve more purchases through the Commodity Credit Corporation and less through private channels; (3) it would "lend substance to the Russian claim that America is using ECA for the purpose of dumping its surpluses"; and (4) it would increase the cost of CCC operations.

Substitute To Be Offered

A substitute amendment, designed to meet some of these objections, will be offered today by Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.). It would restore the billion in cash cut from the House bill, but would use this money "only" for the purchase of American surpluses as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture.

This would allow open-market purchases by ECA, but would still link the Marshall Plan by law to the disposal of surplus products. Other amendments from the floor will seek to compel ECA to ship specific commodities to Europe, and Administration forces will try hard to defeat them.

The House Rules Committee yesterday allotted six hours of general debate to the bill. Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) said he hoped to reach a vote by tonight, but if this is impossible the debate will go over until Monday.

Legion Asks Churchill, Truman to Speak

Los Angeles, March 23 (AP).—The Times said today that the American Legion is seeking Winston Churchill to share speaking honors with President Truman and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower at the annual Legion convention here October 4-9.

The newspaper said it had learned that the President's personal plane, the Independence, would be flown to London to pick up the British statesman. Plans, the Times added, are in the tentative stage.

British Scientists Condemn H-Bomb

London, March 23 (AP). — Outstanding members of the British Atomic Scientists Association condemned hydrogen bombs as instruments of war.

One of the scientists, whose views were disclosed today in the association's news bulletin, said he would refuse to help develop the hydrogen bomb.

Dr. G. O. Jones of Oxford declared, "No one pretends that the development of hydrogen bombs can be anything but a war measure—no new peacetime blessings are promised to salve the consciences of scientists and the public. And if I, personally, am asked to help in developing a super bomb, I shall say, 'No, I am sorry, it is too disgusting'."

Prof. M. Born of the University of Edinburgh and Dr. F. C. Champion of King's College, London, referred to the "prostitution" of science they said was involved in the manufacture of atomic weapons. A woman physicist, Prof. Kathleen Lonsdale of University College, London, opposed all military weapons, contending armaments never brought security to any nation.

Dr. D. H. Wilkinson of Cambridge University, said "Our brightest hope is that the hydrogen bomb will very nearly but not quite work."

Sir John Thomson of Imperial College, London, and Professor R. E. Peierls of the University of Birmingham, agreed the United States had no alternative other than to try to make the hydrogen bomb.

Some of the scientists believe Russia and the United States must make concessions "for common agreement and progressive disarmament." This was echoed in an editorial in the association's news bulletin, which said:

"Each side should decide what are its minimum requirements for security and, while standing firm on these, should be prepared to make concessions on all other points in return for similar concessions from the other side.

"The positions maintained at present by both sides are so far apart that, if these are to be regarded as final offers, the outlook is black indeed."

The editorial said Winston Churchill's suggestion for an East-West meeting on atomic energy control would have questionable value unless either or both sides retreat from "the familiar arguments that have been heard over and over again during the past few years."

The American proposal for control, backed by four other members of the six-nation United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, calls for permanent inspection by an international authority. The Russians contend an international authority would be dominated by the West. They also object to "permanent" inspection.

The Atomic Scientists Association was formed in 1946. Most of those who organized it had worked in the wartime atomic energy project in Britain, the United States and Canada.

Troops End Italian Riots; 18 Injured

Rome, March 23 (AP).—Italian armored troops put down a Communist-led uprising in the southern Italian town of San Severo today after street fighting in which 15 policemen and 3 civilians were injured.

Forty Communists, including the wife of a senator, were reported arrested. Armored cars patrolled the deserted streets tonight.

The clash was one of a series of incidents that followed the 12-hour general strike conducted yesterday by the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor (CGIL).

Premier Alcide de Gasperi told a meeting of his Christian Democratic Party that "difficult times may be in store for us." He asked for "authority to be strong" but did not elaborate.

Communists set up road blocks this morning around San Severo, a town of 38,000 150 miles southeast of Rome at the spur of the Italian boot. They used hand grenades against small police units which attempted to pierce the barricades.

Late dispatches estimated that 5000 demonstrators, some firing from rooftops, fought troops and police before order finally was restored. But, despite the fireworks, no deaths were reported.

Police put in a call for help from troops at Foggia, the big wartime air base 18 miles to the south. An armored column rushed in swiftly, brushed aside the roadblocks and occcupied Communist headquarters and the Chamber of Labor.

The San Severo region has for years been a hotbed of Communist agitation among sharecroppers.

The government announced today plans to redistribute nearly 3,500,000 acres of feudal farmland among some 200,000 poverty-stricken peasants. That is one-sixth of all Italy's arable land. The plan is to go to Parliament this week.

Venizelos Is Sworn In

Athens, March 23 (AP).—Sophocles Venizelos, head of the Liberal Party, tonight was sworn in as Greek Premier.

He heads a cabinet predominantly Liberal but with Panayotis Kanellopoulos, head of the National Unionist Party, in the important post of Defense Minister. The Liberals and National Unionists are centrist parties.

The Liberals hold only 55 seats in the 250-member Parliament, but Venizelos was able to form a government when Constantin Tsaldaris, head of the Populist (Royalist) Party, and other right-wing leaders promised Venizelos their support.

The rightists made their surprse move to block formation of a moderate coalition headed by Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, chief of the National Progressives. The rightists will not sit in the cabinet.

Plastiras' party and George Papandreou's Social Democrats charged Venizelos with a "double-cross" in refusing to go along with a coalition cabinet of Liberals, National Progressives and Social Democrats.

Acheson, Jessup Discuss Aid for Southeast Asia

Secretary of State Acheson and his top advisers on far East affairs began an intensive new study yesterday of American aid measures for southeast Asia.

Acheson called in Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup and assistant Secretary W. Walton Butterworth to report their findings on recent survey trips. Officials said means of bolstering the new French-supported state of Viet Nam in Indo-China against Communist pressure is the most urgent matter now.

Up for decision are a series of recommendations wired last week from Indo-China by a special technical mission headed by Robert A. Griffin, California publisher. These stress immediate measures to help the new Bao Dai regime, with French backing, to restore economic and military stability.

Seretse Leaves London On Way to Own Land

London, March 23 (AP).—African Chieftain Seretse Khama left London tonight for a short visit to his kingdom before a five-year exile is imposed by the British government.

Seretse, who is fighting to keep his throne with his white queen, a former London typist, motored to a Southampton suburb on the first leg of his journey. He will continue his trip tomorrow by flying boat.

Expert Fears Arab-Israeli War Renewal

Dr. J. Cam Hurewitz, former State Department specialist on Palestine, said yesterday there is danger of a new war between Israel and Arab countries in the Middle East.

In a report published by the Foreign Policy Association, he said the present armistice has only halted hostilities but has not solved the question of Israel's boundaries or the problem of Arab refugees.

"As long as these questions remain unsettled the danger of renewed fighting will persist," he said.

Hurewitz was a wartime specialist on Palestine with the Office of Strategic Services. Last year he was political affairs officers at the United Nations secretariat. He is now lecturing on Middle East history at Dropsie College, Philadelphia.

His report said that Communist parties in Arab countries numbered only 35,000 at their greatest, and declined since the Soviet Union indorsed the partition of Palestine.

"Owing to the paucity of Russian material interest, the USSR is not thinking of expanding in this direction during the foreseeable future," Hurewitz said.

"But the proximity of the Arab East to vital Soviet industries and oil resources has aroused strong suspicions in the security-conscious Kremlin about the activities of the Western nations."

France to Unload U. S. Planes With Troops as Dockers Balk

Paris, March 23 (U.P.).—France today called on military personnel to unload American fighter planes from the aircraft carrier Dixmude as Communist-controlled dock workers in Tunisia refused to handle the U. S. equipment.

The planes, 48 Hellcat fighters, constituted the first U. S. supplies under the North Atlantic Military Assistance Program.

The carrier neared Bizerte, where the government planned to unload the planes to avoid a showdown with Communist dock workers at France's main ports such as Le Havre and Marseille. The planes will be flown from there to France.

Red-led dock workers throughout Tunisia went on strike, and the French government, prepared to use soldiers, sailors and airmen to unload the planes.

At Roanne, France, 15 policemen were injured and 23 persons were arrested in a riot over a shipment of tanks. The tanks were not American aid material, but police said a crowd of 1500, inflamed by Communist posters condemning French "war preparations," assembled in protest.

As the tanks were being removed from an armory members of the group attacked officers who were taking them to the railroad station for trans-shipment.

The crowd tossed stones at the officers and security guards and a scuffle resulted. The 15 police officers were injured seriously enough to need first aid or hospitalization. Two were said to have been "injured seriously."

Meanwhile, peace seemed to be settling slowly over French industries plagued for five weeks by strikes.

Dutch Papers Predict Van Kleffens Successor

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, March 23 (AP).—Dutch newspapers today predicted that Dr. Eelco Van Kleffens, Dutch Ambassador to the United States, is to be succeeded by Dr. Herman van Royen, Dutch Ambassador to Canada.

Van Royen, these accounts said, will be succeeded by Dr. A. H. J. Lovink, last Dutch Administrator for Indonesia.

German Reds Insure Victory In Fall Voting

Berlin, March 23 (AP).—The Communists today swept aside the last barrier to total Red victory in the October, 1950, Soviet zone elections. The Eastern Liberal Democrats voted to back a single list of "National Front" candidates.

Two days ago the Christian Democrats surrendered to Communist pressure and came out for the "National Front." This means some 20 million East Germans will be handed a block of candidates' names and given the choice of voting either "yes," or "no." Regardless of how many negative votes are cast, the ticket will win.

The Communists whipped the minor parties into line on the single-ticket idea only after a series of party purges and threats of arrests that drove many leaders to the West.

A spokesman for this East Zone regime blasted today the West German government's declaration favoring free all-German elections.

Albert Norden, deputy information chief, told reporters the West German proposal for a unification vote would mean "enslavement of the German people" under the Western powers.

Norden derided West Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's call for freedom of all political parties in such a unified election. This, Norden declared, would open the door for spreading enmity to the Soviet Union.

24-Hour General Strike Hits Belgium to Force Abdication

Brussels, Belgium (Friday), March 24 (U.P.).—Belgium's 500,000 Socialist workers early today began a 24-hour general strike, expected to paralyze half the nation, to force the abdication of exiled King Leopold III.

The strike was centered in Brussels and the four French-speaking Walloon provinces of southern Belgium, where sentiment is bitter against the King's proposed return to the throne.

Police were alerted in Brussels and Walloonia in the event that violence would break out in the heavily industrial area, which includes Liege, Charleroi and Mons.

In Brussels, taxicabs disappeared at midnight from city streets. Only 30 were left running on emergency call—and they were flying Red Cross flags.

The strike also was expected to stop Brussels' streetcar system. Since the city has no buses or subways, the public transportation system for a million Belgians would be paralyzed.

U. S. Embassy officials planned an inspection tour of the crisis-ridden country. The exact extent of the strike's effectiveness will not be known until later in the morning, but plans in southern Belgium called for maintenance of only vital public services.

The Socialists said today's walkout was a "prelude to vaster and more vigorous action against the King."

The strike began after the Crown Council met yesterday for four hours to try to solve the bitter crisis over Leopold, which already has toppled the government and divided the nation into two bitter factions.

Symington Seen Slated for Security Board As Truman Spokesman Keeps Silent on Rumor

Key West, Fla., March 23 (AP).—White House silence today served to increase speculation President Truman is considering a new assignment for Secretary of the Air Fore Symington.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross passed up an opportunity to quiet the speculation when he was asked at a news conference whether Symington might be shifted to the chairmanship of the National Security Resources Board.

"I am not discussing any pending appointments," he said.

He also repeatedly made it clear he did not want to be questioned about the possibility that Thomas K. Finletter, former ECA chief in London and author of the so-called "Finletter Report" on air power, succeed Symington as Air Force Secretary.

Nor would he say whether the President has Symington in mind for any other post.

Other White House officials said Mr. Truman may not name a new chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission until after his return to Washington next month.

The appointment yesterday of Thomas E. Murray, New York engineer, inventor and business executive, brought the commission to its full quota of five. The President is continuing Sumner T. Pike as acting chairman.

A new vacancy will occur April 15 when Lewis Strauss steps out. His successor may be designated as chairman.

Officials said flatly today that there is no foundation for one published report the President is considering Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of the Army, for that post. He has promised not to try to draft Patterson away from his law practice for the present.

Another published report that Associate Justice Douglas of the Supreme Court might be asked to serve as AEC chairman met an equally firm denial.

one towering force in the world that often seems bent upon engulfing as much territory and as many people as it can."

At the same time he said: "Far better risk a war of possible annihilation that grasp a peace which would be the certain extinction of free man's ideas and ideals."

"Let us not delude ourselves," Eisenhower said, "that, in 1950, establishment of real peace is merely a matter of 'very important personages' signing papers or 'talking tough' in Paris, Geneva, Washington or Tahiti. . . .

"An enduring world peace must be founded on justice, opportunity and freedom for all men of good will; be maintained in a climate of international understanding and cooperation; be free from militaristic menace; and be supported by an accepted and respected police power representing all nations."

Eisenhower sharply assailed what he called the Marxist doctrine that "there is no God and religion is an opiate."

Yet even in this country, he said, we tend to ignore man's spiritual needs:

"Too often we incline to describe the ultimate in human welfare as a mule's sort of heaven—a tight roof overhead, plenty of food, a minimum of work and no responsibilities."

Eisenhower said that not even in the Soviet Union do all the people accept the Marxist philosophy. "Some day," he said, "they will educate their rulers—or change them."

He called for a world effort to raise living standards, then pleaded for "free exchange between the nations of information and knowledge that will make human living a more full expression of man's dignity."

"Even the Soviets, living behind a curtain woven of fear, could afford to work with the rest of us now for this decent and human objective," he said.

Peace has two sides, Eisenhower added—the individual and collective.

For the individual, peace must remove the hopelessness of peoples that makes war an attractive gamble, he declared.

"On the collective side of the coin, peace requires an international society liberated from the threat of aggression by neighbor against neighbor, a threat forever present when one or more nations are committed to the building or maintenance of gigantic military machines," he said.

"No sane man will challenge under the present circumstances the need for defensive strength designed to secure against internal or external attack the independence and sovereignty of a free state. But the continued existence of even one purely defensive force—a force to which there is no apparent need based in the logic of self-defense—denies enduring peace to the world.

"Those who have spawned such a force must either eventually destroy it by demobilization and find justification for the heavy cost already laid upon their people; or use it, tacitly or actively, as a threat or as a weapon. There is no middle course."

The general said science has ended the difference between offensive and defensive weapons—that even the atom bomb is "included in defensive arsenals."

But differences exist partly in the size of armaments.

"The world forms its own sound opinion of a nation's martial purposes, primarily by the size and combination of armaments supported, and by their geographical disposition and estimated state of readiness. To be considered also is the record of the particular nation—the extent to which it observes the ordinary rules of decency, courtesy, fairness and frankness in dealing with others.

"It is by such combinations of standards that we must today classify the world's armaments. For America, with whose professional security forces I have been intimately associated for almost 40 years, I bear witness to peaceful intent. In all those years, I never heard an officer of the Army, the Navy or the Air Force, or any responsible official of government, advocate, urge or discuss or even hint at the use of force by this country in the settlement of any actual or potential international problems."

Housework Easy Without Nagging Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

Tydings Says 'Agent' Quit Job 5 Years Ago

example. If the files prove he is wrong on this allegation, "McCarthy has stated, he will appear as a "discredited witness."

The Washington Post learned last night that the person named by McCarthy was requested for the four-month overseas mission by the man who headed it, oil tycoon Edwin W. Pauley. He was then the special representative of the President on the Reparations Commission, with the rank of Ambassador.

The Secretary of State at the time was James F. Byrnes.

McCarthy Assails Tydings

After Tydings' statement yesterday, McCarthy said that Tydings "knows the State Department's story is untrue." He said it might be possible that the man was not paid like an ordinary employe, but that he played a major role in formulation of U. S. policy.

"This man has a desk in the State Department, or at least he did until three or four months ago," McCarthy said. "He is one of their top advisers on Far Eastern affairs, or was until three or four weeks ago."

Asked by reporters if he meant "weeks" instead of months, McCarthy replied:

"That's right—weeks."

He said Tydings has in his possession "a sworn statement from a State Department official that this man was a consultant on Far Eastern affairs as late as last December."

McCarthy said if he were permitted to cross-examine the suspect the latter "would either indict himself or perjure himself."

Meantime, Tydings revealed yesterday that he has now formally asked for the secret files on the "key case" plus the other persons named by McCarthy, from the President, the State Department, the Department of Justice and the Civil Service Loyalty Review Board.

At Key West, Fla., where Mr. Truman is vacationing, aides said he had not yet received the request. Tydings, told by reporters of this statement, explained that his letter would probably not get there until today, since he had sent it to the White House for relay to Florida.

Files Sought 10 Days

For a matter of 10 days, Tydings has been seeking the files from the State Department, and the President has participated actively in consideration of the knotty question on whether to make them available. Tydings' letter, however, was the first strictly formal request.

Earlier in the day, McCarthy made public a blistering telegram he sent to the President. It accused him of an "arrogant refusal" to release the files for examination by the Senate subcommittee, and said this was "inexcusable and is endangering the security of the Nation."

McCarthy, who has been referring to himself increasingly in the third person, wired Mr. Truman:

". . . Your spokesman stated that some portion of the files might be made available to clear innocent people. This seems dangerously in line with your original statement that you would cooperate with the (Tydings) committee to 'disprove' McCarthy's charges. It would seem that the files should be made available for the material they contain regardless of whether it discloses dangerous people working for the Department or clears innocent people.

"You indicate that you would be establishing a precedent by making all of the files available on these individuals. As you know, prior to the order which you signed during the Hiss investigation blacking out all information from Government agencies on communistic activities of Government employes, the FBI files were made available to congressional committees."

McCarthy reminded the President that previously State Department files were also made available.

Strictly speaking, the President has not "refused" to open the files, for he has not yet received a formal request. Actually, the matter has been debated, with advice given to him pro and con, and he has still to decide what he will do.

Other developments yesterday related to McCarthy's charges were:

Flanders Would Aid Acheson

1. Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) told the Senate he wanted to "disassociate" himself from any Republican campaign to discredit and oust Secretary of State Acheson.

He took note of press reports that the Republicans had picked Acheson as a major target for the 1950 political campaign, and said he would have no part of it. Rather, he added, he would "join with those who are seeking to assist (Acheson) toward a more constructive line of foreign policy."

Taking their cue from a warm indorsement of Acheson earlier in the week by Mr. Truman, several Democratic Senators prepared to rally to his defense. Six or eight were reported as planning speeches on the matter in the near future.

3. Representative Stephen M. Young (D., Ohio) stated flatly that there were no spies in top State Department ranks, and called McCarthy a "publicity-seeking" rabble rouser.

4. Representative Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.), a former FBI agent and member of the Un-American Activities Committee, promptly labeled Young's comments "ridiculous and absurd."

5. From Wheeling, W. Va., a newspaper editor disclosed that an investigator from Tydings' committee was expected to look into the speech there by McCarthy on February 9, which started the whole affair.

The investigator is expected to talk to newspaper reporters. Curiously, there is no existing text of the speech thereby McCarthy on February 9, which started the whole affair.

House Votes $150,000 to Hold New Spy Probes, Compile 'Bible'

The House gave its Un-American Activities Committee, $150,000 yesterday to spend on new spy probes and to prepare a million-name "Bible of subversive activities" in this country.

This sum is in addition to a $200,000 allotment the committee has received since January, 1949, to carry out its investigations which have been concerned mainly with Communist activities.

The grant was approved 347 to 12 after Chairman Wood (D., Ga.) told the House more funds were needed for the "Bible" and for new inquiries dealing with the Ku Klux and several Fascist organizations.

Wood did not go into any details about the million-name list except to say it will list "known Nazis and Communists" throughout the world whom the committee links to subversive plots in this country.

He said the committee staff is amending a list of 250,000 names of Communists and several thousand Communist front organizations to bring it up to date.

The American Legion meanwhile urged the committee to act speedily on measures it is considering to clamp stringest curbs on Communist activities.

This plea was made by James F. Green, of Omaha, Neb., chairman of the Legion's Americanism commission, who said "time is precious."

Green told the committee that it's "foolhardy" to spend billions in an effort to contain communism abroad while "blinding ourselves to the danger at home."

The lawmakers previously had been advised by the Justice Department to go slow on anti-Communist legislation until the courts rule on constitutional questions involved in the conviction of 11 Communist leaders on conspiracy charges.

But the Legion representative said the court decisions may not be handed down for several months.

"Please don't wait," Green said. "While we debate, our enemies act."

Crommelin Detached, Ordered to His Home

San Francisco, March 23 (AP).—Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin, opponent of the Pentagon's armed service unification policies, was detached from duty today and ordered to go to his home in Montgomery, Ala.

The Navy already had ordered Crommelin furloughed, as of April 1. Today's order merely detached the captain from his duty on the staff of Vice Admiral George D. Murray, commander of the western sea frontier.

Montgomery Asked To Defer Road Action

The English Village-Bradley Woods Citizens Association last night requested the Montgomery County Council to defer action for a period of six months to a year on the proposed county road ordinance.

In a resolution adopted by its executive committee, the association urged the delay so the council may "thoroughly consider revising the ordinance in light of testimony at the recent public hearing."

It asked that the council also "publicly request" written opinions from individuals and builders in the county before making a decision.

The resolution urged "particularly" that the council receive statements from "qualified experts as to technical aspects of the ordinance, with a view toward eliminating objectionable features."

The Montgomery County Council has held a public hearing on a proposed ordinance setting up minimum standards for road construction. Some builders have said its requirements will prove too costly.

After 2 Weeks

UMW Office Here May Be Condemned

Representatives of the United Mine Workers yesterday were told that the organization's headquarters at 907 15th st. nw., faces condemnation proceedings as unsafe.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King gave the UMW two weeks to make progress on the necessary repairs before possible condemnation action.

Present at a meeting with King were Willard Owens, assistant counsel of UMW, and William Thomas, superintendent of UMW buildings.

Building inspectors said they had notified the organization last July that among other faults, main beams on the third, fourth and fifth floors were inadequate.

According to King, the UMW officials said they had been prevented from entering the office of a tenant, Maurice Shapiro, real estate operator, because of a disagreement over rents.

This, they said, has halted efforts to complete the alterations required by the building inspectors.

NLRB Battle Near Decision

power to investigate complaints of unfair labor practices and to prosecute such charges is lodged solely in the general counsel of the NLRB. The board itself then acts on the charges as a judicial body.

The President's plan would transfer the general counsel's functions to the board, but there would be "internal separation" of the prosecution and adjudication powers, Pace said. Under the "internal separation" of powers, no one investigating or prosecuting a complaint would participate in the decision by the hearing officers or the agency.

Budget Bureau Director Pace said there was no question of the legality of the President's Plan No. 12 in the opinion of the Justice Department. If this plan is illegal, then so are the reorganization plans, some of which have already been passed by Congress last year, Pace contended.

The five-man NLRB panel—with Chairman Paul M. Herzog as spokesman before the committee—gave their "unequivocal and unanimous" support for the President's Reorganization Plan.

Herzog said that because of the confusing and contradictory language of the Taft-Hartley Act, the board could have "blocked the effectiveness" of the law, but that instead the panel had tried to cooperate with the general counsel by delegating to him certain of the board's own powers.

After 30 months of experience with the separation of powers between the board and the general counsel, Herzog testified, the board is convinced the "experiment" is a failure. The split in authority has caused friction within the agency and confusion among management and labor unions, Herzog asserted.

"Continuation of the split in authority will constitute a continuing threat to effective enforcement of the law, whatever that law may be," Herzog said.

The NLRB chairman cited a number of cases in which the general counsel, who is to defend the decisions of the board before the courts, has taken a position contrary to that of the board. Herzog said the situation created a "nearly insoluble dilemma."

Among other witnesses yesterday was William B. Barton, director of employer-employe relations for the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. He said Reorganization Plan 12 "violates the fundamental principle of fairness that is necessary in the administration of so controversial a law as any general Federal labor legislation is bound to be." Barton also challenged the legality of the plan.

A. & P. Clerks Win $5 Across-Board Salary Increase

The Retail Clerks, Local 6398 (AFL) have won a $5 across-the-board wage increase for fulltime clerks in a new contract signed with the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., covering its retail outlets in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia, it was announced last night.

Terms of the contract, to become effective April 1, were disclosed by P. M. Clifford and F. H. McGuigan, business representatives for the union. The contract will run until December 2, 1951, with a wage and hours reopening clause on December 2, 1950.

25c Red Cap Fee Approved in 4 Cities

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday authorized four midwestern railroad terminals to increase their Red Cap charges from 15 cents to 25 cents a bag, effective April 1.

The terminals are at Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio, Indianapolis, Ind., and St. Louis, Mo. They are the stations that spearheaded the 1947 request for a 5 cents increase which later was extended throughout the East.

Since 1940 the fixed baggage fees at railroad terminals have gone to the companies. The Red Caps are paid wages plus any tips they are able to pick up above the baggage fee.

The commission said present charges for the service are not enough to cover the terminals' costs, and have resulted in "substantial deficits" for the past several years.

Two Boys Nabbed Quickly, Confess 2 False Alarms

Within minutes after two false fire alarms were turned in from adjacent boxes last night, two alert policemen captured two boys who admitted pulling the boxes. They were seeking a third.

The first alarm was from the Ketcham School, 15th st. and Good Hope rd. se., and the second from Fendall and V sts. se., two blocks away. Pvts. M. F. Molesky and J. W. Ates obtained descriptions of three boys, and almost immediately, captured two of them in an alley nearby.

A 9-year-old told the policemen his 11-year-old brother, who vanished, made him pull the boxes under threat of a beating. A 12-year-old who was caught, corroborated this.

Board Permits Empire Bldg. Restoration

Plans to restore the Empire Building moved forward another step yesterday when the District Board of Zoning Adjustment granted a variance to permit repairs to be made.

Owner Nick Papanicolas has announced plans to restore as a four-story hotel the building at 9th st. and New York ave. nw., which killed four when it collapsed in December, 1947.

Architect Warren G. Sargent said bids on the construction contract will be opened March 28. But there still remains the task of drawing up zoning covenants, Sargent said, before final District approval of the project can be obtained.

The zoning board yesterday approved 22 requests for variances sought at a Wednesday hearing, denied three and deferred action on five.

It approved the request of Parking Service, Inc., to build an all-mechanical parking garage. To be located at 1426 K st. nw., the garage would park four cars on each of 18 floors by means of an elevator and a mechanical device which moves cars from the elevator to a parking space.

The board deferred action on a request to allow use of historic Woodley estate, 3000 Cathedral ave. nw., by the Maret School. Board Member Robert O. Clouser said it was held up for "further study."

Group Asked To Back Many Water Projects

By The Associated Press

Sponsors of some 75 rivers and harbors projects yesterday asked that they be indorsed by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress.

The sponsors appeared before the projects committee of the organization.

Approval of a project, congress officials explained, means that the organization recommends it to the United States Congress for inclusion in the Nation-wide waterways program.

The annual convention will open today at the Mayflower Hotel with Senator McClellan (D., Ark.), congress president, presiding.

McClellan is to report on progress made on the organization's program in the past year. He then will call on various Senators, Representatives and Government officials to report on various of the Nation's water programs, such as flood control, rivers and harbors, reclamation, irrigation, merchant marine, conservation, water transportation and the like.

The congress continues through Saturday.

Meeting in advance of the Congress, the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association at a session yesterday heard its president, Representative Whittington (D., Miss.) urge prompt action on legislation now pending in the United States Congress authorizing various waterways projects.

The bill, which passed the House last year with $1,200,000,000 of projects, now is awaiting Senate action. The Senate Public Works Committee increased the bill by some $350,000,000.

Jr. Naturalists To Register for Training Course

Registration for the 1950 Junior Naturalist Training Course will open at 9:30 a. m. Saturday in the Interior Department Auditorium, 19th and C sts. nw.

Open to children between the ages of 9 and 12, the course emphasizes nature appreciation, enjoyment of the outdoors and respect for public property. It is sponsored by National Capital Parks as a free public service.

The course consists of two Saturday morning meetings in the Interior auditorium, four conducted walks in park areas on Saturday mornings and two bird walks on Wednesday mornings before school.

Ballston Group Quits Federation in Political Row

An Arlington citizens association has withdrawn from the county Civic Federation, charging the parent group is more concerned with politics than community welfare.

The New Ballston Citizens Association took the action Monday night on a motion by its secretary-treasurer, George C. Updegraff.

A formal statement, released yesterday by the New Ballston group, accused the federation of functioning "principally for the local political advancement of selected individuals rather than as a 'civic' organization for the coordination and accomplishment of community welfare projects of member organizations."

Updegraff said he was referring to the federation's support of "nonpartisan" candidates for county offices.

Arlington's "nonpartisans," who last November won a majority on the 5-man county board, have been described as a "third party" by Democratic political opponents. Nonpartisan candidates are chosen in nominating conventions sponsored by the federation and several other civic orgaizations.

The New Ballston group also accused the federation of taking summary action on "important matters" before delegates had a chance to submit proposals to member organizations. The statement cited as examples the federation votes on proposed amendments to the Virginia income tax law and the proposed county school budget.

The charge of political partisanship was immediately denied by federation president T. Oscar Smith.

Thousands Attend Opening in Armory Of National Flower and Garden Show

The big, bald Armory was transformed into a teeming Garden of Eden yesterday as the National Flower and Garden Show came to town.

Several thousand Washingtonians trooped in to see spring all wrapped up in one million-dollar package of flowers.

Tens of thousands of flowers, towering evergreens, resplendent dogwood, a 200-year-old mill were a few of the items that filled the Armory from one end to the other.

In the garden club events the Georgetown Garden Club knocked down first prize in the "1800" division with its "Georgetown Formal."

Women's Club a Winner

In the "modern" division first prize was taken by Belle Haven Women's Club with its "Circa 1953" garden of the future. A feature of this one was something calculated to appeal to men: A grass plot so small "it can be cut with scissors."

Most sensational, perhaps, of all the displays was that of 30,000 tulips brought from Holland.

Some flowers were to be seen publicly for the first time in the Department of Agriculture's impressive exhibit.

Features included the new hybrid speciosum lily, grown not in soil but in chemicals.

Niches Attract Crowds

The largest crowds were attracted by the "small-niche" displays. The "whimsy" section included one in which the Mighty-Mo was shown behind a big eight-ball.

Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Supreme Court associate justice, admitting she personally has no green thumb but loves all flowers, cut a ribbon to open the show.

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan and Mrs. Brannan and Faye Emerson, the actress, were among the visitors.

The show, sponsored by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists and chartered by Congress in 1901, is in Washington for the first time. It will continue through March 29. Doors are open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Admission price is $1.25 for adults, 40 cents for children.

Some $25,000 in prizes will be awarded.

Fair Weather Follows Storm

Fair, warmer weather today is scheduled to bring to an end a storm which brought nearly 1½ inches of rain here, and flooded the Peace Cross area of Bladensburg.

As the storm moved northeastward, it brought snowfalls, some heavy, in Virginia, western Maryland, and up to 10 inches of snow in the mountains of Pennsylvania.

The Monocacy river was above flood stage at Frederick, Md., and the northeast branch of the Anacostia went out of its banks, causing the Peace Cross flood.

The flood at Washington-Baltimore, blvd., and Defense hwy., began shortly after midnight. By morning the intersection was under three feet of water. It was still under some water last night.

Because detour signs were not put up at the start of the flood, rush hour auto traffic became jammed for five miles, to Berwyn, Md. State troopers, Prince Georges County, Bladensburg and Hyattsville police turned out to unsnarl it. Cars were detoured through Hyattsville to Rhode Island ave. Some high-wheeled trucks and buses got through the flood, but many passenger autos stalled.

Cellars of several hundred homes in the area were flooded and many were heatless because furnaces were put out of commission.

Snow fell across the northern part of Montgomery County, reaching as far south as Rockville. It melted during the day as rain followed. Sligo Creek overflowed its banks and blocked a county road between Kensington and the Rockville Pike during the morning.

An earth slide partially blocked the 4600 block of Canal rd. nw., for a time yesterday. One-lane traffic was maintained.

The weather bureau recorded a total rainfall of 1.41 inches, of which more than half fell between 7:30 p. m., Wednesday and 1:30 a. m. yesterday.

Yesterday the wind blew from the West at 25 miles per hour, with gusts up to 50 miles per hour.

The forecast called for a low of 32 degrees early today and high in the upper 50's.

'Plan to Kill' Aired In Campus Slaying

Iowa City, Iowa, March 23 (U.P.).—A former co-ed testified today in the murder trial of Robert E. Bednasek that he told her he 'had intended to kill" Margaret (Gee Gee) Jackson, 20, last summer.

The defense brought out that she had spent 2½ months in a psychopathic hospital. She said she had gone as a voluntary patient "because I was nervous."

The witness, Mrs. Gloria Jacobson, 26, daughter of a University of Iowa professor, said she had dated Bednasek, 24-year-old Iowa senior, three times before Gee Gee met her death in his campus rooming house last December 11.

The State charges Bednasek, 24, a psychology student, choked Miss Jackson to death because he was afraid of losing her. The defense says she died accidentally when he tried to show her how easy it was to make a person black out."

Dr. E. J. Boyd, University of Iowa pathologist, wound up six hours of testimony by admitting under cross-examination that it was "possible" Gee Gee died from some other cause than strangulation. He also said it was possible that severe injuries to her neck were caused by a single blow rather than the "compressive force" he had described for the State.

Victim of Cancer

Death Near, Slayer Gets Her Freedom

Detroit, March 23 (U.P.).—A cancer-stricken woman, convicted of plotting the murder of her husband 18 years ago, left prision today to spend her last days with her 10 children.

Mrs. Minnie Lambert, 61, was smiling as she left Receiving Hospital. Gov. G. Mennen Williams had commuted the life sentence she received for plotting the death of her husband with his brother.

Doctors give her only two weeks to live. She is suffering from cancer and weighs only 80 pounds. A son, Irwin, said "we don't want her to die in prison." He took her to St. Joseph's Hospital in Flint.

"We're deeply indebted to the governor," he said. He and the other children had visited their mother regularly in prison. They agreed to pay all hospital and nursing costs to "make her happy for the few days she has left."

Mrs. Lambert was sentenced with her brother-in-law, Albert Lambert, for the crime incited by their love affair. Believing her husband, Darius, was suspicious, she and Albert plotted his death. She sent Darius to Albert's farm where her husband was killed. Albert died six years ago in prison.

Institute to Spotlight Small Business Woes

Washington lawyers will take a look at the problems of small business at a special institute Saturday.

The institute on the organizational problems of small businesses will be held in the Mayflower Hotel. Sponsored by the District Bar, the conclave will be addressed by out-of-town authorities and a panel of local attorneys.

Doctor Offers Ingrid Terms For Divorce

Hollywood, March 23 (AP).—Dr. Peter Lindstrom today handed Ingrid Bergman's attorney a list of conditions under which he will agree to a quiet divorce, clearing the way for her marriage to Roberto Rossellini in this country if she wishes.

Its terms, said the doctor's attorney, Isaac Pacht, included:

1. That under no circumstances will Pia, 12, child of the surgeon's marriage to the Swedish actress, "ever have contact with Rossellini or in any way come under his domination."

2. That he, Lindstrum, will have custody of the girl and that she will remain with him at all times.

3. That Miss Bergman will have rights of visitation—alone.

4. That he and Miss Bergman settle their property rights in a friendly manner, with most of their funds going into trust for the daughter.

If agreed to, Dr. Lindstrom told the actress' attorney, Greg Bautzer, he will obtain a quiet divorce. If not, he will fight her in the courts.

There was no indication whether he would get the divorce in California, where it would not be final for a year, or in Nevada, where it could be concluded in six weeks.

An agreement would forestall filing of a divorce suit by Dr. Lindstrom in which, Pacht said, Rossellini will be named as co-respondent. Miss Bergman and Rossellini are now in Italy.

The attorneys' conference, however, broke up without agreement.

But Pacht and Bautzer issued a statement which said in part:

"We think we have been making progress. Because of that we hope to meet again for continued conference tomorrow. We have been trying to explore the many facets of this case."

Both attorneys were hopeful of an out-of-court settlement.

Miss Bergman, suing last week, not only demanded Pia's custody, but $154,000 in proceeds from her picture, "Stromboli," which she says Lindstrom has received

Miss Bergman and Rossellini have announced they will be married on the basis of her Mexican decree, but so far the Swedish Government has not recognized that divorce. She is a Swedish citizen.

Washington Woman's Purse Snatched in N. Y.

New York, March 23 (AP).—Three youths were arrested last night after allegedly snatching the purses of two women. Two detectives caught one of the youths after a chase.

He said he is Isaiah Romas, 19. On him, police said, they found the purse of Mrs. Grace H. Corkhill of 1727 Massachusetts ave., Washington, D. C., who said she was punched in the face.

The other victim was Mrs. Roger MacPherson of New York.

Two more youths were arrested later.

Man Seized On Charge of Numbers 'Play'

The police vice squad yesterday arrested a man said by Lieut. Roy Blick to be "a regular" numbers writer in the 100 block of B st. se.

That block adjoins the Library of Congress and the House Office buildings.

The man was booked as Julian Edwin Pope, 51, of 1348 A st. se. He was picked up at the American Grill, 139 B st. se.

Lieutenant Blick said an undercover man made "plays" with Pope Wednesday and yesterday, and that marked money was included in $1823 found on the defendant's person. Blick said Pope attempted to drop numbers slips when arrested, but they were recovered.

Lieutenant Blick said Pope has been arrested on gambling charges three times in 18 months, but cases against him where dismissed on motion of his attorney.

Arrested on a U. S. Commissioner's warrant, he was booked on charges of setting up a gaming table, operating a lottery, and possession of lottery slips. He was released in $2500 bond for appearance today before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

last night. I was one of the councilmen who signed the suspension order . . . I simply rent that house to a tenant. I don't know what goes on in every piece of property I own."

Under the reorganization plan, supervision of the police force was given to the council's police committee comprised of Leonard G. Simpson and John P. Campbell.

Notice Not Served

Simpson, chairman of the committee, said he had not served Nebel with notice of the suspension.

The act was based, councilmen said, on various "complaints." Not even Mayor Andrew Gasch would say what the complaints were. The suspension is effective pending an investigation, but no date has been set for a hearing, it was learned.

Nebel said: "It's all news to me."

Nebel, 35, who had ben police chief three years, insisted that the suspension and the raid were not connected.

Warrants were obtained by another Bladensburg policeman, William A. Baxter, and given to Nebel. Also on the raid were Prince Georges County Police, including Lieut. Charles N. Thomsen, chief of county detectives.

Nebel described the house, a two-story white frame structure, as a "numbers pickup station."

When he slipped into the house, shortly before 2 p. m., he said, he so completely surprised Holland and Wilkinson that he was able to sit down at the table they were seated at before they knew he was in the house.

Holland, Nebel said, was making an entry in a numbers book and apparently was accepting a numbers "play" from Wilkinson.

Nebel said he put his hand over the numbers book and said: "That's all, boys!"

The raiders seized the book, nearly $400 in cash and "a pile" of numbers slips—all on the table, they said.

called police from the warehouse office.

Through a description of the car and its license tags, furnished by Langley and Kidwell, police traced the car's ownership, only to discover it had been stolen earlier in the day.

The owner, Don Olson, of 4019 E st. se., said his wife, who works for the Federal Security Administration, had parked the car at 1st and B sts. sw. about 8:30 a. m.

The car was found abandoned at 5th st and Oakdale pl. nw. by Detective Edward Hayes of the Second Precinct several hours after the holdup. It was taken to police headquarters to be examined for fingerprints.

No Time to Be Scared

The cardboard box containing the money was found empty in the car, police said.

Police said the bandits had broken a side window of the car to get in and apparently had crossed the ignition wires to start it.

Langley, who lives at 3233 Ely st. se., and Kidwell, whose home is at 821 Maryland ave. ne., said the whole thing happened so quickly they scarcely had time to be "scared."

"I was a little nervous," Langley admitted, adding: "But I guarantee I'd recognize those two men anywhere anytime." Both he and Kidwell spent several hours at police headquarters going through the rogue's gallery. Police would not say whether they were able to identify the holdup men among the photographs.

They described the gunmen as about 38 to 40 years old, clean shaven, with dark glasses, and wearing gabardine trench coats and dark hats.

Company officials said the weekly pay roll for warehouse employes is usually brought to the warehouse from the main store at 8th st. and Market space nw., "sometime around 11 a. m." on Thursdays.

The bandits apparently had "cased" the job thoroughly and knew when the money would arrive and in which truck, officials said. The truck is used daily to run errands and deliver wares between the warehouse and the main store they said.

175 Paid From New Pay Roll

The money represented the week's pay for 175 employes. Store officials said a new pay roll was made up in the afternoon, so all received their wages, despite the robbery. Store officials said the stolen money was covered by insurance.

In another holdup several hours later, Quenton Dodson, 30, of 2501 14th st. nw., was struck over the head with the butt of a gun and robbed of $300 by two Negroes.

Dodson, who drives a truck for the Standard Cigar & Tobacco Co., 49 I st. ne., told police he was making a delivery at 4th and I sts. nw., when the two men attacked him, robbed him of the money, which represented company funds, and then fled on foot. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for scalp lacerations and released.

3 Feared Dead As Fire Sweeps Austin, Tex., Store

Austin, Tex., March 23 (AP).—Three men were believed killed today in a spectacular fire at the T. H. Williams department store. Another was injured.

Fire Chief John Woody said there was no hope of rescuing three men reportedly trapped when a flash fire swept through clothing stock in the basement.

Eight firefighters were overcome by smoke.

The fire, starting from a blow torch used by an air-conditioning crew, was brought under control, but the basement was flooded and rescuers said the men reported trapped could not possibly be alive.

Senate Rules Group Backs Crime Probe uses of interstate commerce which result in the violation of the laws of the several States.

"3. The extent to which organized crime may corrupt the governing bodies of the Nation.

"4. The extent, if any, to which syndicates engaged in organized crime may control the facilities of interstate commerce.

"5. The extent to which the use of the facilities of interstate commerce by organized crime may tend to obstruct local authorities in the enforcement of local criminal statutes."

Brewster told the Senate that mobster money has invaded "such important businesses as utilities, local transit, laundries, cleaning and dyeing, beverages and hotels." He said the money involved came from "gambling, vice and black markets."

"Reports are prevalent," he said, "that at present a large syndicate of mobster money has been buying into various legitimate businesses, eliminating existing management and, through deals with suppliers, kickbacks and control of local political machines, have drained the enterprises dry."

Brewster said mob money has financed stock prices manipulation, and been used "to foment proxy fights and to attract to the syndicate otherwise legitimate investors by the lure of easy money."

The Senator said he had reports that "five or six large corporations have been pressured into making deals" within the last few years. He pictured this method:

"The management is blackmailed into purchasing large blocks of stock from the syndicates at prices in excess of the market in exchange for promises not to cause trouble."

He called this a new form of "the old practice of forcing the payment of protection money—or else." He said the syndicates have made big profits in the market by "illegal methods and the rigging and manipulating of stock prices."

Their methods include promises of bonuses and extra commissions to employes of brokerage houses to induce purchases of stocks in which the syndicates are "engineering a deal," Brewster said.

Alexandria Jury Indicts 3 in Slaying

Three men were indicted on murder charges by the Alexandria Corporation Court grand jury yesterday.

They were among 34 persons named in 48 indictments handed up by the grand jury.

One of the indictments charged Abe Lawson, 47, of 704 N. Henry st., and Row Lee Browley, 47, of 1013 Oronoco st., with the murder of Raymond B. Dodson, 49, an ice plant engineer.

Dodson was found unconscious November 29 outside the Mutual Ice Co. plant in Alexandria, where he was in charge of the 4 p. m. to 12 midnight shift. He died that day at Alexandria Hospital of a fractured skull. Police said he had been robbed of approximately $75.

Police said Lawson and Browley admitted the slaying after their arrest. They pleaded innocent to the charges yesterday before Judge William P. Woolls in Corporation Court.

Also indicted on a murder charge was James Boyd, 26, of 401 Princess st., Alexandria. He was arrested for the fatal shooting of Walter Underwood, 25, of 540 N. Royal st., Alexandria, last January.

Police said Boyd admitted he fired a .22 caliber rifle at a group of men, which included Underwood, shortly after he and Underwood got into an argument at a party at 518 Oronoco st.

James T. Sillex, who lives on a shanty boat located on Hunting Creek off Hunting Terrace at the southern tip of Alexandria, was indicted for maintaining a continuous and public nuisance.

Police said he has been serving time in Alexandria jail on a misdemeanor charge, but that his sentence was suspended yesterday, so that he might be free to move his boat by today.

City Attorney V. Floyd Williams said warrants have been issued for eight other shanty boat dwellers, charging them either with creating a nuisance or unlawfully occupying city-owned property. They are to answer the charges in police court Tuesday.

Also indicted yesterday were 21 persons on charges of grand larceny; eight for felonious assault; six for housebreaking; three for attempted burglary; three for nonsupport; two for robbery and one for burglary.

Man Cleared After 2 Years In Prison

James M. Matthews, 39, a business school teacher, was freed yesterday of the carnal-knowledge charge for which he had served more than two years of a 10-to-30 year prison sentence.

Assistant U. S. Attorney William Hitz announced that the Government would not retry the case against Matthews, whose conviction was set aside Tuesday by Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court.

The jurist had voided the conviction after the complaining witness, who was 14 years old at the time of the alleged act, admitted that she had perjured herself.

The girl admitted that she lied in 1947 when she testified at Matthews' trial that he made her pregnant. She said that she was acting under the duress of Matthews wife, Eulalia "Madame Yvonne" Matthews, a spiritualist.

While in prison, Matthews had given police information that his wife was the "brains" behind the 1947 larceny of $18,000 from the First National Bank of Alexandria. She was convicted of this and sent to prison for 4½ years.

Matthews asserted that his wife had procured the perjured testimony to "put him away" so that he would not be able to inform on her.

Sec. Matthews to Present Slayer's Appeal Personally in Supreme Court if Permitted

NYHT News Service

Secretary of the Navy Francis T. Matthews has decided to appear personally before the United States Supreme Court to argue an appeal for a Nebraskan convicted of murder if the court will hear the case, it was learned yesterday.

The appearance of a Cabinet member before the Supreme Court was said by legal authorities to be unique in modern judicial annals. They said that any such precedent as might exist would probably go back to the time of Webster and Clay.

The case is being brought by Henry Hawk, convicted of murder by a Nebraska court in 1936, and now serving a life sentence. His appeal is based on his allegation that he was denied opportunity to consult with counsel in the critical period between his arraignment and the impaneling of the jury.

Sec. Matthews was appointed by the Nebraska supreme court in 1948 as counsel for Hawk, who was appealing as a pauper. He serves without compensation.

When President Truman asked him to take the office of Secretary of the Navy in May, 1949, Matthews advised the president of the circumstances, and told him that he felt that he had an obligation to represent Hawks through to the final appeal.

Firm Fined for Working Women 8 Hours Plus

The Western Auto Supply Co., 3941 Minnesota ave. ne., yesterday was fined $25 in Municipal Court for violation of the District's 8-hour-a-day law for women.

The company pleaded guilty to working women more than 8 hours and failing to keep records showing meal recesses. The fine was imposed by Judge Frank H. Myers.

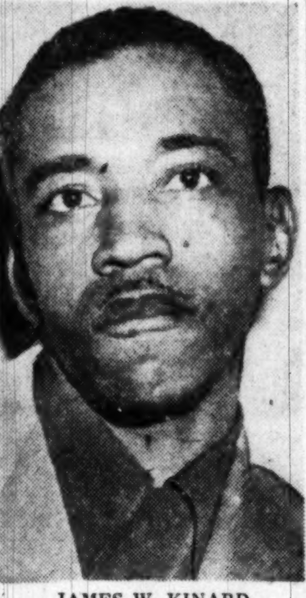
Awaits Verdict In Drug Case



JAMES W. KINARD
Drug case defendant

Theft Case Goes to Jury

Stebbing and of Charles West, hospital chief pharmacist:

"They are trying to defeat justice to protect their own neglect and carelessness in running their own hospital, which is also our hospital. It is your money that runs that hospital."

He then pointed to testimony of hospital officials that they were to account for more than 4000 vials of streptomycin. Also, he charged that, until the Kinard arrest, drug supplies were available to "every Tom, Dick and Harry" in the hospital.

Of Dr. Stebbing, McLaughlin said:

"He would do all in his power to try to show that the streptomycin did not come from his hospital. Whether he would come here and tell a falsehood, I don't know."

McLaughlin then said that even after learning of the shortage, Dr. Stebbing left examination of the records to his subordinates.

The superintendent has testified that he "does not know" that any shortage exists at the hospital, but nevertheless has tightened up security and record-keeping at Gallinger.

Dr. Stebbing testified also that he would be "very distressed" should it be shown that the large amount of medicine involved in the case had been stolen from the hospital. He said that it seemed "inconceivable" to him, and that it might merely be the result of a "paper shortage."

He said that it was only recently that the shortage had been called to his attention "officially" and that he had hitherto left the matter to his subordinates. Also, he declared that although he originally suspended Kinard, he later reinstated the defendant because he doubted that there was any "risk."

Kinard was accused of selling the streptomycin for $175 to Dr. Alvin G. Thornton, a private physician at 4832 Deane ave. ne. Dr. Kinard denied this and told police who found the chloromoycetin on his person after his arrest at Gallinger that he intended to use the drug to "build himself up."

Kinard testified that he did not mean this and that he was taking the chloromoycetin to the pharmacy. He said that, as was his custom with small orders, he was going to bring back a requisition later.

Of this, McLaughlin said, "Dr. West concocted that story to alibi the defendant as to that chloromycetin on his person."

Defense Attorney Thomas Ahern also attacked record-keeping at the hospital and said the records were in such shape that "it would take the best professors at the Wharton School of Business" to interpret them.

Prof. Reyniers to Speak

Prof. James Reyniers, Notre Dame University bacteriologist whose research in germ-free life has attracted national attention, will lecture at 3 p. m. Friday at the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., to civilian and service physicians and medical educators.

Trial Sparks Probes of Gallinger Record

An investigation of Gallinger Hospital's methods of handling supplies was ordered yesterday after testimony of loosely kept records was given in District Court.

In a letter to the Commissioners, District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger said he had ordered his budget and property officers to "make a survey of methods employed" and to report to him on changes needed.

His action coincided with the trial of James W. Kinard, pharmacist's aide at Gallinger, on charges of stealing $288.75 in "miracle" drugs. Testimony at the trial told of "lost" letters, "missing" requisitions and 4000 other vials of drugs which could not be accounted for.

Seckinger said the investigation was ordered to determine whether methods should be changed and if there are any other indications of theft. He said he didn't know of any other irregularities and called the survey "precautionary."

District Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton said he had also asked his property officer to investigate.

Alcohol Clinic Visited by 200 In Open House

The District's Alcoholic Rehabilitation Program Clinic was visited by some 200 persons yesterday, many of whom never touch the stuff.

The clinic's routine of treating those who are in distress from excessive indulgence, however, was not interrupted during a two-hour "open house" at the Weightman School, 23d and M sts. nw.

Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, director of the recently remodeled clinic, directed visitors through the airy, modern facilities where the lease is a new one on life for many chronic alcoholics.

Assisted by his staff of co-workers, Dr. Wexberg conducted tours of the building and with the aid of color posters pointed out the six steps of treating patients:

1. Admissions on voluntary basis or on recommendation of "drunk court."

2. The intake interview by a social worker or public health nurse, getting the patient's history.

3. Physical examinaton by a physician or public health nurse.

4. Diagnostic interview by psychiatrist, with assignment of the case to individual or group therapy, or psychological study when necessary.

5. Psychological examination by a psychologist, including intelligence and vocational aptitude tests.

6. Treatment by specialists with the aid of occupational and recreational therapy.

The clinic now has a case load of about 170 patients, more than half of whom have come in voluntarily. Others have been referred by the courts, which allows a 90-day treatment period in lieu of a sentence in many cases.

Walter Reed Gets Theater With Ramps

Walter Reed Hospital here now has its first permanent theater building, and with "drive-in" ramps for the crippled patients.

The new building, replacing the greenhouse structure that formerly served for picture showings, adjoins the hospital wards. A special feature is its sloping ramp from the hospital corridor to the theater floor level.

For wheelchair and Stryker-frame patients, this means ready access to the special theater space reserved for them.

Built in modern architectural lines, the one-story brick building has a seating capacity for 462 persons. A stage has been provided for local and visiting entertainment groups performing for hospital patients and personnel at the Army Medical Center.

Shock Experts Tour Naval Ordnance Lab

Some 200 scientists, specialists in the study of vibrations and shock, yesterday toured the new, 4 million dollar Ordnance Environmental Laboratory, at White Oak, Md.

The inspection tour of the newest facility of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory was a concluding feature to the two-day, fifteenth Shock and Vibration Symposium, held in this city under auspices of the Research and Development Board, United States Department of Defense.

Dedication services at NOL's auditorium preceded the tour. At the services, Dan A. Kimball, Undersecretary of the Navy, termed the new unit "possibly the best of its kind that will be built within our lifetime."

Rear Admiral Frank E. Beatty, in one of his last official duties as NOL commandant, said the new testing laboratory is a striking example of "economy through ingenuity."

Dog Trying to Help Owner, 60, Kills Him

Easton, Pa., March 23 (AP).—Joseph Keglovitz, 60, died today as the result of having his hand chewed off at the wrist when his 2-year-old Dalmation dog attempted to help him.

Police said Keglovitz apparently fainted in his yard yesterday, and the dog tried to drag him to the house. The animal bit through the man's wrist in the rescue effort. A neighbor found the injured man and took him to a hospital, where he died.

12 Killed, 2 Jump In Crash of B-50

Tucson, Ariz., March 23. (AP).—Twelve men were believed killed today in the flaming crash of a B-50 Air Force bomber on a remote desert area near Hyder, Ariz. Two men parachuted to safety.

Witnesses said the big plane exploded and wreckage was scattered over a five-square-mile area.

It was the second fatal Air Force plane crash today. At Rome, N. Y., a captain was killed and four other men injured when a C-47 transport crashed and burst into flames during a snowstorm. The victim was identified as Capt. Posie M. Clinton of Graham, Tex.

The B-50, a modified version of the B-29 Superfortress, was based at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base here. It had taken off on a routine flight to March Air Force Base, Calif., this morning.

Maj. Donald C. Foster, public information officer at Davis-Monthan, said it was flying at 17,000 feet.

Mrs. Mary Blacketter of Hyder said "it seemed to explode like a bomb."

The two airmen who escaped by parachuting were picked up and flown to military hospitals where their conditon was not believed serious.

"The wreckage was spread over a five-mile area," Gene Palmer, an employe of the Arizona Highway Department said. "Three hours after the crash parts were still burning. Bodies were strewn in an area of about a square block. They were mutilated and you couldn't tell just how many there were."

Mrs. Blacketter said one of the two survivors told her one of the bomber's engines caught fire shortly before the explosion. He said he was at an escape hatch when one of a series of blasts occurred.

Housewife Asks For Larger Coins

MRS. MAURINE LOOS of Forest Hills, N. Y., appears before the Senate banking and currency subcommittee to appeal for the minting of 2½ and 7½-cent coins. Mrs. Loos said she represents the "voiceless housewives and mothers" and that her appearance was made possible through the courtesy of the American Institute for Intermediate Coinage, which paid for her trip and a baby sitter for her 9-month-old daughter

New York's Rainmaking Bid Is Washed Out—by Rain

New York, March 23 (AP).—New York postponed its first test of rainmaking today—on account of rain.

Dr. Wallace E. Howell of Harvard University, the city's $100,-a-day rain-making adviser, said "soupy weather" prevented the scheduled attempt to "milk the clouds" by spreading dry ice from Police Department airplanes.

Officials said there was "only a possibility" the first experiment to fill depleted reservoirs would be made Friday.

Despite a gain of 1,034,000,000 gallons in city's reservoirs officials today ordered new curbs on water use.

The Water Department banned used of refrigeration and air conditioning systems which do not recirculate the water they use. This will not affect large stores, office buildings and movie theaters, which have recirculations systems.

If every day were like today, the city would need a raindispeller instead of a rainmaker.

The natural rainfall ranged upward from an inch and did more for the city's depleted reservoirs than leaders of the city's $50,000 cloud-seeding project ever hoped to do in a day.

The Catskill Mountain watershed, which feeds the city's largest reservoirs, had heavy rains during the past 24 hours. The forecast for the rest of the day was rain mixed with snow.

Rail Strike Deadline Delayed

Chicago, March 23 (U.P.).—The deadline for a Nation-wide strike of railroad trainmen and conductors was extended today until July 1 because of the slow progress of testimony before a presidential fact-finding board.

Two unions representing the railroad workers would have been free to strike 30 days after the board was due to report back to the President March 25.

But by today the unions had not completed their testimony in a working rule dispute, and railroad representatives were still to be heard.

Order Lifts Rent Control in Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., March 23 (AP).—Norfolk was freed from rent control, effective today, to end the last wartime regulation designed to stabilize the business life of the community.

Claud P. Brownley, jr., area rent director since the controls were imposed June 1, 1942, said that while he has received no official notification on the decontrol order he was advised in a telephone communication with Kenneth A. Campbell, regional director with headquarters in Atlanta, that it had been issued.

Buying Influence Here Is Criticized

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States advised businessmen yesterday not to "buy influence" when trying to get Government contracts.

It issued a 64-page booklet blueprinting the procedures of doing business with Federal agencies without the aid of so-called "5 percenters." The booklet included this advice:

"If a man who wants to be your Washington representative takes your money for the influence he can exert to get you a contract he's either violating the law and involving you in it, or he's selling you something he can't deliver. Maybe both."

But the Chamber noted that there are many legitimate representatives in Washington who can be of help to businessmen because of their "knowledge of procedures."

End of Orient Flights Feared

The Civil Aeronautics Board told Northwest Airlines yesterday it may have to quit flying the Alaska-Orient route because the Air Force is closing six bases in the Aleutians chain for economy reasons.

Northwest now flies three round trips weekly from Anchorage to Tokyo, Okinawa and Manila. It depends upon the Air Force bases for radio navigation, weather information and on most flights for refueling at Shemya Island, off the western tip of the chain.

The CAB made public a letter from Chairman Joseph J. O'Connell, jr., to Croil Hunter, Northwest president, saying the CAB "could not support the appropriation or use of funds in the amount that appears to be necessary for this purpose." The amount has been estimated at three million to five million dollars a year.

The Air Force announced in December it would withdraw its people from six bases because of budget limitations. The bases are at Shemya, Adak, Umnak, Amchitka and Atka Islands and Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

In St. Paul, Hunter said "there will be no interruptions of Northwest Airlines operations to Alaska and the Orient."

Too Little, Too Late

Spring blew into Washington the other day, and a pretty sorry affair it has turned out to be. So sorry, in fact, that it escaped our notice at the time. Things have come to such a pass, however, that comment is inevitable. For the denizens of the Weather Bureau have predicted cold and wintry weather lasting well into April.

It was considerate of the weather brewers, of course, to provide Washington with such a mild winter, at least during the first portion. There was, to be sure, some mild perplexity over an apparent reversal of the seasons during the January heat wave. Even that was a good-humored sort of conjecture, however, and the fact that the only noticeable snow arrived after the robins was excusable, we suppose, as a reminder that winter still exists somewhere. But this late spate of bluster, when the crocuses and jonquils and forsythia and cherry blossoms are so confused they don't know whether to bloom or hibernate, is rather overdoing things. If the weather boys want to save some of these wintry blasts for use next July, it will be perfectly all right with us.

Loyalty Firings

A split decision of the United States Court of Appeals has upheld the constitutionality of the President's loyalty program. This is the affirmation of a self-evident proposition: the power of the Government to protect itself against subversion. Indeed, Judge Prettyman in the majority opinion does not regard dismissal for suspected disloyalty as "punishment," and he asserts that the due process guarantees of the Fifth Amendment do not apply since Miss Dorothy Bailey, the appellant, has not been deprived of life, liberty or property. While he does not condone the unauthorized publicity in the case, he asserts the paramount right of the Government to guard against infiltration. Cases of doubt, he implies, must be resolved in favor of the Government.

No sane person disputes this right; there can be no vested interest in a Government job. What is at stake is the manner in which the Government exercises its right to protect itself. Here is the terrible dilemma: Must the safeguarding of the Government's interest involve star-chamber proceedings in which defendants cannot know the evidence against them? In this respect we believe the court majority—which, incidentally, has not undertaken to pass upon the question whether Miss Bailey is loyal or disloyal—has adopted too narrow a view of what is entailed in the deprivation of a person's good name through a badge of disloyalty unsubstantiated by judicial evidence.

Judge Edgerton in his dissent holds that the interests of the Government and that of the individual are synonymous. First, he says, the preamble to the President's loyalty order makes it clear that "maximum protection" is to be provided. This protection must include evidence and an opportunity for cross-examination in a full judicial hearing; even aliens in deportation proceedings are accorded this right. "Unsworn anonymous statements may be used and useful as leads to evidence," he asserts, "but not as substitutes for evidence."

The Government is rapped and overruled by the court for the three-year proscription on further employment of the fired appellant. This is in line with the Lovett case. Judge Edgerton, however, insists that the majority overlooked the major implication of that decision—dismissal for disloyalty is punishment and requires all the safeguards of a judicial trial. It is noteworthy that the Lovett defendants were reinstated. The Supreme Court ruled:

> Those who wrote our Constitution . . . intended to safeguard the people of this country from punishment without trial by duly constituted courts . . . And even the courts to which this important function was entrusted were commanded to stay their hands until and unless certain tested safeguards were observed. An accused in court must be tried by an impartial jury . . . he must be clearly informed of the charge against him, the law which he is charged with violating must have been passed before he committed the act charged, he must be confronted with witnesses against him . . . and even after conviction no cruel and unusual punishment can be inflicted upon him.

"Not only the basic right to judicial trial, but every one of these basic safeguards, unless it be the last, was violated here," Judge Edgerton concludes. Even if Miss Bailey's services in a nonsensitive job were on the whole undesirable, "to oust her as disloyal on rumor and without trial is too much to pay for protection against such harm as she could do in such a job." This is the point. Does the admitted Communist danger require such a perversion of ordinary standards of fairness as to permit (in Judge Edgerton's damning phrase) "unsworn confidential reports of unsworn statements of anonymous accusers" to be the criterion, not merely for dismissal, but for the final stigma of disloyalty to the United States? We cannot think so.

Money In Bulk

The substitution of a single appropriations bill for multiple supply bills is a step in the direction of establishing more effective controls over budgeting. For that reason we sincerely hope that Congress will confound critics of this innovation by enacting a measure that can be defended on its merits. Of course, it is impossible to pass judgment on the bill just reported out of the House Appropriations Committee until it has been subjected to expert analysis. It should not be forgotten, however, that the omnibus bill is simply a procedural tool that makes it possible for Congress to do a better job of revising executive spending requests than under the former system of voting separate appropriations bills over a period of months.

The success of the new method depends upon the intelligence and zeal with which members of committees assigned to study budgetary proposals do the work of revision. Arbitrary cuts in appropriations are as indefensible as cuts made under the former system of reporting out a series of appropriations bills. Although an omnibus bill provides safeguards against excessive and unbalanced expenditures by affording Congress an over-all survey of spending projects, it is just as necessary as heretofore to show cause why such cuts in appropriations should be made and to take cognizance of the effect of proposed reductions in appropriations on the functional activities of the Government and the efficiency of the services rendered by various agencies and departments. An omnibus appropriations bill, in short, is not a mechanical device for cutting Government costs and making inroads on Government deficits, as some members of Congress apparently believe.

Moreover, even if the committee members responsible for whipping the bill into shape perform their task intelligently, there is always a danger that amendments from the floor will partly nullify the results of their efforts. For example, a move is now under way to recommit the bill reported out of the House Appropriations Committee with instructions to make large additional flat cuts in appropriations. Unless the sponsors of this proposal are able to specify ways of effecting such cuts without impairment of services, proposals of this kind are likely to set back the movement to reform appropriation procedures.

Similarly the practice of attaching irrelevant riders to appropriations bills by amendment from the floor would, if largely indulged in, provide opponents of the omnibus bill with a strong argument in favor of its abandonment. For the chief objections to the one-package bill is that it makes it even more difficult than at present for the President to exercise his veto power in connection with appropriations. To meet this valid objection to the new system, we conclude that the President should be given authority to veto items in omnibus appropriations bills as a means of eliminating riders and also discouraging log-rolling which results in increased spending. In that connection it will be interesting to see whether the cut made in the appropriation for the Army Corps of Engineers' rivers and harbor projects will be restored before the omnibus bill is passed by the House.

As The Washington Post pointed out in a recent editorial, the item veto would not deprive Congress of control of the purse strings. For Congress could authorize the President to eliminate certain items, with the proviso that his action would stand unless Congress disallowed it within a stated period. While it is a moot question whether the item veto is constitutional, there is nothing to prevent Congress from introducing it, pending a final court decision. A good many States have given the Executive authority to reject individual items in appropriations bills and return them to the Legislature for further consideration. The system appears to have met with general approval in such States. We see no reason why it should not prove equally successful in case of the Federal Government. Selective vetoing of items in the omnibus appropriations bill would enable the President to check legislative excesses more effectively and in so doing remove one of the strongest objections to this innovation, thereby improving the chances that the new system will prove to be a worth-while reform of a permanent nature.

The Saigon Incident

Whether our naval visit to Saigon was a good will mission or a demonstration has become arguable since the riot last weekend. Perhaps it was a bit of both—a greeting to the Emperor Bao Dai, whom we have recognized as the head of the Viet Nam government, and a warning to the Vietminh forces under Ho Chi-minh that our recognition of Bao Dai means support. It was certainly taken as a warning, and Ho's men staged a demonstration against the United States which put Saigon in a temporary uproar.

In itself the incident may not mean very much. Any well-trained gang can play ducks and drakes in a city which is not completely under control. In this case Bao Dai's men had just taken over the police functions under the agreement with the French giving Bao Dai a great degree of independence. However, the episode is another of the multiplying signs that the assumptions upon which our recognition of Bao Dai was based were not wholly correct. One was that Ho Chi-minh was on the way to defeat, with Bao Dai progressively extending his power. Another was that by far the bulk of Viet Nam was already under Bao Dai-French control, and that Ho was cooped up in the north. Saigon is well to the south, and, judging from the riot, looks as if it is still infiltrated badly. The fact is that Ho is everywhere, as most of the newspaper correspondents testify who flocked to Indo-China after recognition. They are giving a different picture of conditions from that which was furnished at the time of recognition.

Insurrection In Italy

A powerful strong-arm division of Italian Communists yesterday seized the city of San Severo in the Province of Apulia near the Adriatic coast and about 135 miles east of Rome and held out for nearly nine hours against an armored column of troops and caribinieri, meanwhile besieging the local police in their barracks. And this was only one, although the most formidable, of yesterday's series of demonstrations throughout Italy where the tempo of Communist violence has been quickening to a point not far from civil war.

The seriousness of the latest crisis with which Premier de Gasperi and his government find themselves obliged to cope is to be seen in the fact the police have been unable in some places to quell the Communist rioters and obliged to invoke the assistance of the military. Local prefectures have now been given authority by the central government to forbid rallies and demonstrations wherever they are, in the judgment of the police, likely to result in public disturbances. In the present state of affairs such orders are virtually unenforceable without violence in districts where the Communists have strong popular support.

The hand of Moscow is, of course, plainly visible in all these demonstrations in Italy. The ultimate purpose of them, however, is not yet clear. It is altogether unlikely that the Communists consider themselves powerful enough to attempt a coup d'etat. Probably there is some intention of adding to the anxieties of Marshal Tito as well as to those of the Gasperi government. Probably, also, there is the purpose of disconcerting the Holy Year pilgrims by a demonstration of the strength of Italian communism.

Anyway, the government has no choice now but to meet the challenge with resolution and firmness. About 40 persons, including, it is said, some prominent figures of the party, have been arrested in connection with the San Severo insurrection. It will be well worth watching to see what sort of action is taken against them.

Point IV

It is to be hoped that the House members will recall their "we must do something" attitude on the morrow of the H-bomb announcement. The congressional air was then full of suggestions for affirmative action in the foreign field in an effort to offset the drifting and the incipient feeling that war was inevitable. In politics, said Ferrero, looking at the aftermath of the Napoleonic wars, "there is nothing so rare as the great constructive mind." Point IV belongs singularly to the statesmanship of world leadership, and the budget to put Point IV in effect is included in the omnibus nonmilitary foreign-aid program which will be submitted today to the House.

Point IV is divided into two parts: technical assistance and investment, linked through the investment opportunities which technical assistance would eventually provide. The technical aid section is contained in the current authorization. It is a United Nations project, and the total budget for 1950 is $85,620,000, of which the American share would be 35 million dollars. (Another 10 million dollars has been added to finance existing development and student programs under the Institute of Inter-American Affairs and the Smith-Mundt Act, respectively.) The aid would go to the American republics, the Near East, and Asia.

The Point IV program, as the financing shows, is modest, but fundamental, not only in laying the ground for investment but in helping people to do better what they already do. The American know-how in such areas as agriculture and fisheries is universal in application. Modernization, of course, could easily be disruptive in primitive economies, but the nature of the present program, as the U. S. Chamber of Commerce has testified, could make for manageable improvement within the framework of these economies. We hope the House will agree.

SMALL BOY IN A GARDEN

More energetic than discreet,
He swings himself more than the hoe,
Too big for him, for the defeat
Of weeds—and half a radish row.

So much ambition cannot be Admonished roughly for a few Small lettuce plants he could not see—
So much concerned with work to do.

Soon frantic effort slows to thought;
He mops his brow and plans to go
When he has smoothed a little plot
And planted seeds—too deep to grow.

He swings off like a victor now,
Self-satisfaction in his smile;
He leaves his hoe and little plow
To stumble over afterwhile.

"Nonpartisan Elections"

I want to thank you for the clear and helpful editorial of March 20 on "no party label" elections in Montgomery County. It is another evidence of public assistance rendered by The Washington Post.

The matter of nonpartisan elections at the county level is important as the type of person we want on the County Council will not be subservient to any political machine. We now have the most able government we have had in the county's history and the same high caliber must be maintained.

The Lindsay Act is a good example of political chicanery and was sneaked through in the closing days of the Assembly. It was kept a deep secret for several months after it became law.

We have fought for the kind of government Montgomery County deserves and will keep up the fight. We believe our cause is just and a wise Court of Appeals has sustained us twice. We hope for the same outcome when we appeal the present suit. NORMAN B. AMES,

"Cut Wood Or Starve"

As a social worker with experience in relief work "circa 1932," and with many vivid and unpleasant memories of the old WPA wood yard, let me reveal to Mr. Earl Christensen, whose letter on your March 7 editorial appeared March 15, that working with an axe and saw, or any other work for which a man is unsuited physically or mentally, can be exhausting, dangerous, demoralizing and disastrous. Mr. Christensen's "youthful experience with an axe and saw" would hardly make him an authority on the "Cut Wood or Starve" subject.

If his only experience is "youthful," and he has not cut wood for 10, 15, or 20 years, it would be interesting to see just how "exhilarated" he would feel after eight hours on the wood pile.

Relief needs were greater "circa 1932," but long before that time we had learned that the man on relief is still a human being.

Accident Pictures

As another reader who considers The Washington Post one of the outstanding metropolitan dailies of the country, I would like to take the opposite stand to that expressed March 14 by Mr. Kenneth W. Crosby of Huntington, Pa., and commend The Post for its excellent pictures of motor vehicle accidents.

Some years ago I shared Mr. Crosby's opinions on the subject until I read the foreword of the 1939 Annual Report of the New York State Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

It pointed out: "To illustrate the death and suffering caused by motor vehicle accidents, pictures, some of them admittedly gruesome, have been used in this report. While they may prove offensive to some, it is our considered opinion that the tragic aftermath of accidents cannot be truthfully portrayed otherwise. One does not catch the full import and horror of war by pictures of well-equipped soldiers on parade. Nor can one appreciate the unbelievable violence of accidents by pictures of automobiles with dented fenders."

Mr. Crosby probably knows from statistics that he takes his life in his hands each time he crosses a crowded street or drives his car. But perhaps he doesn't know that each year in addition to the more than 31,000 persons killed and one million injured, our hospitals are cluttered with approximately 100,000 others who suffered permanent impairment in traffic accidents. If these pictures are "sensational" then sensationalism is needed to remind us that death and violence can be avoided. It is common knowledge among those who teach safe driving, fire and accident prevention, that visual education is paramount in such instruction.

Televised Education

I recall that, some years ago, a survey was conducted to determine the extent of college students' knowledge in certain basic and essential subjects. If I am correct, it was noted with some dismay that they were particularly deficient in history and geography. Now it appears that a survey recently made by the Burdick Junior High School of Stamford indicates that three quarters of the student body spend an average of 3.86 hours per day per student watching television.

Would it not, accordingly, be desirable to develop a plan whereby this time spent before the television set could be made useful as well as interesting by introducing instructive programs? We might then hope to find the average student of the future somewhat informed with regard to the glorious history not only of his own country but of the other American nations, who would not place Buenos Aires in Brazil or Edinburgh in Ecuador.

"Shorter Vacations"

Concerning your editorial of March 19 on shorter vacations for the Federal worker, no one could deny that the Federal Government provides liberally for annual and sick leave. However, all leave, in addition to the vacation, must be charged against the annual allotment. This pertinent stipulation was not mentioned in your editorial. With this consideration, the Federal worker's leave benefits are not so disproportionate as they would otherwise seem.

In private enterprise, incidental periods of leave depend on the policy of the individual business enterprise together with the nature of the work in which the salaried employe may be engaged. The annual vacation does not always cover all leave that may be available to the employe for vacation and emergencies. For the Federal worker, any annual leave above the allotment is without pay.
PHILIP F. SMITH
Arlington.

In eight years as a Federal employe, my average annual vacation has been two weeks, but on January 1, 1950, I had only 12 days annual leave. The rest was used on necessary business or legitimate economy steps. If annual leave had been 20 days a year, my average vacation would have been one week.

Tit For Tat

In his recent statement of our policy toward Russia, Secretary Acheson makes a series of demands for a change in Russia's policy which apparently ignore our own record. Among them is the demand that Russia should allow free entrance to people from other lands. But we have just refused entry to our land of a group of eminent men simply because they are Communists. Capitalists must be allowed to enter Russia, but not Communists to enter the United States.

More On Senator McCarthy's Charges

Many of us, I believe, feel deep embarrassment and shame over Senator McCarthy's current performance. It is commonly suggested that his reasons are one of two: (1) His hysterical fear of defeat at the polls when he tries for reelection and his belief that his present course of action keeps him in the public eye and makes his name a household word; and (2) an honest conviction that he is serving the best interests of his country.

It seems to me that neither of these reasons will bear scrutiny. Too many times other public figures who have used the same tack have met with disaster for this to recommend itself as a promising path to reelection. Also, such a course argues a degree of brutality and cynicism that should not be attributed to any man without better evidence.

As for the second reason, it is impossible to believe that Senator McCarthy does not know that he is giving aid and comfort to the Communist countries which far outweigh any benefit to the United States. If he believes the State Department to be harboring Communist agents, there are better ways open to the Senator to correct the situation.
E. C. C.
Washington.

If the banner in your March 21 cartoon by Herblock had been changed to read "Down with McCarthy" and the man on the left had been labelled Washington Post. I think it would have been a more befitting illustration for the "Somebody Around Here Is Helping the Commies."

I heartily approve of Elisabeth McSherry's letter in the same issue, especially the last paragraph reading: "In these perilous days, with Communists in control of over one-third of the earth's surface, it is neither patriotic nor good sense to give aid and comfort to the enemy by minimizing the efforts of our Congressmen to stamp out Communist activities.
W. A. FRAVEL
Falls Church, Va.

Your headline of March 20, stating that Senator McCarthy demands the resignation of the Secretary of State, brings to mind this urgent question: Is there no way in which American citizens who are deeply concerned for the well-being of their Nation may be protected against the injuries they and their country are suffering at the hands of the Senator from Wisconsin? When the names of our finest public servants are dragged through the mud by the hysterical, irresponsible actions of one man, especially a national legislator who enjoys congressional immunity, the shame and offense are shared by all citizens.

That Senator McCarthy has the privilege of freedom of speech I do not deny. But when the speech deals in untruths and half truths, when it seriously jeopardizes the American position in international relations and at home strengthens the subtle cry for a police state, then the freedom the Senator enjoys is being dangerously misused. It is time that the upper house of Congress impeached this offending member, or that the Republican Party repudiated his activities lest it be thought to put party politics above the Nation's welfare.

Struggle For Tax Reform

A Communication

THE INTENSE struggle for wartime excise tax repeal should have been unnecessary. The wartime excises were designed to check specific kinds of consumption in wartime, with resulting reduction of production and employment. These taxes have no place in time of peace.

Except for the uninformed opposition of the Treasury and the support of the Treasury by the President, the wartime excises would have been repealed long ago. Not only are they punitive and discriminatory; they are harmful to specific industries and communities and weigh heavily on the general level of employment. The continuance of the wartime excise taxes is inconsistent with the clear mandate given by Congress to the Administration in the Employment Act of 1946 to use its powers to maintain a high level of production and of employment.

But the struggle for the repeal of these taxes, unnecessary though it should have been, has served a useful purpose. It has developed economic research under the sponsorship of the National Committee for Wartime Excise Tax Repeal. In this research, Leon Henderson and his associates have shown that the net loss of revenue to the Government as a result of repeal will be far less than the country and Congress has been led to believe. These economic studies demonstrate that the net loss from the repeal of all wartime excise taxes and tax rates, except on gasoline, tobacco and alcoholic beverages, will not be more than 1150 million dollars, and it may be substantially less.

THE COMMITTEE for Economic Development, working entirely independently has shown how wartime excises can be repealed, and how, without any new sources of revenue and with only moderate reductions in projected expenditures, the budget will be balanced with high levels of productive employment and will show a surplus besides.

These exhaustive studies of the National Committee and the CED, when taken together, give to the public a way of judging the merits of over-all wartime excise tax repeal. The conclusion is inescapable that over-all repeal is possible and desirable. No evidence has been made available to the public, by the Treasury or otherwise, to controvert this conclusion.

The struggle has therefore resulted in demonstrating that both justice and prudence argue for over-all repeal.

Beyond the urgent and specific necessity for wartime excise tax repeal, the struggle has brought sharply to public attention three reforms in basic fiscal policy that are long overdue. These three reforms when they are at last adopted will have an importance for the country's economic welfare even greater than excise tax repeal itself.

The three reforms to which I refer are the following:

1. Let the Federal deficit or surplus be measured by the cash-consolidated budget instead of the administrative control budget.

2. Let tax rates be set to balance this budget at agreed levels of high productive employment, instead of by guessing what national income is likely to be a year or more away.

3. Let Federal disbursements for capital items that pay income to the Federal Government be funded instead of causing needless and burdensome tax levies on consumption, investment and employment.

THESE REFORMS mean a basic change in Federal fiscal policy. They are a first long step in attaining built-in stabilizing fiscal measures at points where they will do great good. They bring debt management back into the economic picture so that it can be used as in the war as a stabilizing force for high employment. They eliminate the hocus-pocus of impossible business forecasting from the crucial job of setting tax rates. Above all, they make the test of surplus and deficit in terms of the hard realities of cash intake and cash outgo instead of the esoteric and inconsistent definitions of the administrative control budget.

I have heard these reforms characterized as "bookkeeping" reforms, implying that they are of negligible importance. The importance resides in the ideas that underlie the bookkeeping, and in the new and impersonal influence on high production and high employment these stabilizing reforms will bring.

The struggle for excise tax repeal has been necessary to get excise tax repeal. But it has served a deeper purpose in bringing out of the library and laboratory for public understanding fiscal reforms which when adopted will serve the people well for years to come.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Kremlin's Two Offensives

BERLIN.—This sad, beleaguered city is the best place in Europe, at the moment, to test the sincerity of the Kremlin's hints of settlement of the world conflict, that have so excited wishful thinkers everywhere. Berlin is the test of the new peace offensive.

The test reveals that while the Kremlin talks of peace, the Soviet high command in Germany is actually preparing another major cold war offensive that will be more dangerous, and will involve more direct military provocation, than any in the past.

A previous report in this space has already described the projected May invasion of Berlin by the East zone's Communist youth, and the series of other planned riots that are to follow this first attack. The purpose is both to intimidate the west Berliners, and to demonstrate "popular" demand for the "liberation" of Berlin from the Americans, British and French.

The Soviet stage managers will then hold an East zone election on October 15. A militantly Communist east German government will be automatically returned to office. The worst kind of trouble can be foreseen immediately thereafter, unless the strongest counter-measures have been taken in the meanwhile by the Western powers.

WHAT WILL occur is very simple. The east German puppet government will announce that the presence of the Western powers in "their capital" of Berlin has grown intolerable to the people. They will then enforce a new blockade, using units of the new German "people's army" instead of Russian troops on the roads and railways. The Soviets meanwhile, will disclaim responsibility for this "spontaneous manifestation" of German popular feeling.

There are clear, practical reasons for forecasting this elaborate but immensely menacing comedy. Soviet intentions toward Berlin have already been openly proclaimed by the plans for the May rally of the Freie Deutsche Jugend and other projected attacks of the same nature. Another little blockade of Berlin, similar to that which announced the previous total blockade, is already being enforced on the highways and canals. And in great haste and at immense expense, the Soviet high command has just completed a railway by-pass around Berlin's Western sectors.

The rail by-pass can have no purpose whatever, except to strike from the hands of the Western allies their last card in any struggle for Berlin. This last card, which was never played in the former blockade, consisted of the power to disrupt all Soviet zone communications, by cutting the East German rail net at its hub in the Berlin West sector. This is now no longer possible.

Meanwhile, the Soviets retain their last card, which they also failed to play in the former blockade. All-weather operation of the airlift depended, and will depend again, on the so-called ground control approach system. This system alone permits landings in poor visibility, such as will prevail almost continuously after October 15. But the ground control approach system is hopelessly and easily vulnerable to radar-jamming.

THE EVIDENCE clearly suggests that the Soviets are preparing another blockade of Berlin. Since they cannot stand another defeat by airlift, it is logical to expect them, this time, to disrupt the airlift by radar-jamming of the ground control approach system. Such is the measure of their new boldness, undoubtedly based on consciousness of their own growing superiority in naked military power.

There are two things to be said about this set of facts. First, if the Western allies are proven to be too weak to maintain their Berlin position, all western Germany, and indeed all western Europe, will be transformed into a sort of political mush. The new Soviet tactics of terror will have been brilliantly inaugurated with an enormous victory.

Second, there is no need for the tactics of terror to succeed, either now or in the future. The Kremlin is still almost certainly too weak to carry through the planned Berlin blockade, if firmly and clearly warned in advance, with all the solemn authority of the United States, that this kind of provocation will not be tolerated and will meet with the hard response that it deserves.

As to the future, mere Western firmness of purpose will cease to be effective, as Soviet rearmament progresses and the Kremlin's boldness correspondingly increases further. But this is a problem simple to solve—we need only stop listening to the phony claims of dubious officials, and embark on a serious defense program. That will attack the trouble at its root.

Opening The Files

By Marquis Childs

Let J. Edgar Hoover Testify

SENATOR McCarthy began by charging in his first political speech that there were 207 card-carrying members of the Communist Party in the State Department. When he used this same speech a little later in Nevada, the figure 207 had been crossed out and 57 written in.

Childs

Up to the moment of this writing it has not been established on the basis of McCarthy's presentation that there is or ever was a Communist Party member in the department. This is a fact that should not be lost sight of.

It becomes doubly important in view of the speech of Republican Chairman Guy George Gabrielson at Lincoln, Nebr. That speech lends considerable official party backing to the McCarthy line. It refutes those who have been saying that he is acting on his own while the party leadership looks on worried about the next move their irresponsible prankster may make.

Gabrielson says, "We have too long tolerated communism . . . within our Government." He says, "We must drive them out!" This goes quite a way toward making it official.

Now this may be good politics. Gabrielson directs the same kind of attack against Americans for Democratic Action, which has been a highly effective spark plug of the Democratic Party. The elections this fall will be in some measure a test of the anti-Communist, anti-Socialist line of the GOP.

BUT there are other considerations that overshadow the outcome of the next election or even the election after that and after that. The future form of this Government is conceivably at stake—concepts and traditions going back to the founding of our system.

Republican Senators are demanding that confidential files of the executive branch of the Government be opened to Senate inspection. Even though presumably this would be done in executive session, the material in these files would certainly be "leaked." A concept preserved since the time of George Washington would have been destroyed and a dangerous precedent established.

On the immediate and practical side, the efficient functionings of the Federal Bureau of Investigation would be impaired. Even though he is reluctant, and properly so, to give public testimony on matters of public policy, the Senate committee should call on FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover for his opinion on opening the files.

There can be little doubt what that opinion would be. The issue arose in the first trial of Judith Coplon. Miss Coplon's attorneys persuaded the judge that the FBI files should be opened.

After the first, three or four files were spread on the record, Hoover made a strenuous protest to the then Attorney General, Tom Clark. He pointed out that sreious injustice was being done to individuals by putting under public gaze hearsay and rumor—the raw material of the FBI files—intended only for confidential use. He also pointed out with great emphasis that if this practice were to be followed in other cases, the usefulness of the FBI would rapidly diminish.

AT THE first Coplon trial, it will be recalled, the Department of Justice went so far as to suggest that if it came down to making the files public in relation to vital evidence in the case, the evidence might be withheld. That is a measure of how seriously the FBI took this action.

It may be, of course, that the Republicans do not really want the confidential files opened. They may want to have their request refused so they can say that the refusal cloaks the guilt of individuals who have not been successfully tagged as "pro-Communist" by random accusations.

But if the request is granted, those who have forced the decision should at least have a clear understanding of its immediate and practical consequences. The man who can make that unmistakably clear is FBI Director Hoover.

As was pointed out in this space, his opposition to the Smith amendment attached to the National Science Foundation bill was stated in a letter sent to Congress by the assistant to the Attorney General. That amendment would make the FBI detective, policeman, judge and jury. Hoover gave it as his opinion that the FBI does not want powers which would create a "state police organization."

The raw material of the FBI files may be compared to a newspaper reporter's notes. Material that cannot be verified or that is plainly libelous is not included in a news story. Government must be permitted the same responsibility of privacy for the raw material of confidential Government investigations.

Bullitt Warns of 'Appalling Peril' to U. S.

William C. Bullitt, one-time Ambassador to Russia, last night lashed out at the "blind witlessness with which we are facing the terrible threat to our whole country and to the whole Christian civilization"—Russia.

A strong critic of the Soviet regime since 1935, Bullitt warned, "It isn't possible to get along with the Communists."

They have an ingrained duty to "spread their creed throughout the world; they will not stop," he said. In 1939 "Stalin controled 170 million people; today he controls approximately 800 million"—a long step "forward in his world conquest."

Stalin Grows Stronger

The former diplomat said in the past decade, while Stalin has grown stronger militarily and territorilly, America has lagged and the post-war gap in strength has been closed in rapidly.

"We let him (Stalin) take over China . . . consolidate his hold on eight European countries," Bullitt said.

He made an indirect criticism of Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson in charging President Truman failed to heed advice of military leaders to furnish aid to Nationalist forces on Formosa because Acheson advised against it.

"We are in utterly appalling peril," he told more than a hundred debaters gathered at Georgetown University from 26 colleges for the second annual Georgetown invitation debating tournament.

"There Isn't Much Time"

He urged the young people to exert every possible influence to "make America face up" to the Russian threat. "Do it now; there isn't much time," he emphasized.

The speech was given at a banquet for the debaters at the university. The tournament, sponsored by the Edmund Campion Forensic Society of Georgetown's Foreign Service School and the Philodemic Debating Society of Georgetown's College of Arts and Sciences, began yesterday afternoon and winds up Saturday night.

'Paste-Up'

Stalin Voting Picture Fake, Paper Says

New York, March 23 (AP).—Newsweek says a picture of Prime Minister Stalin, described as showing him at the ballot box for Soviet Russia's March 12 election, was a paste-up job, with the head from a picture taken "several years ago."

Stalin's head in the news photograph had been taken from a picture several years older and simply pasted on the new shot. Nearly all Soviet pictures are badly retouched, but there was no mistaking the difference in the grain and the lighting between the reproduction of Stalin's head and the rest of the news shot," the magazine stated.

The ballot box picture was sold to newspapers, magazines and picture agencies in the United States by Sovfoto agency. Sovfoto is a New York concern which has distribution rights in North and South America for pictures taken by the press photo agency of the Soviet Union, a branch of the Russian government's propaganda facilities.

Miss Helen Black, who owns the Sovfoto agency here, said the picture appearing in Newsweek, credited to Sovfoto, evidently was a radiophoto, since no original copy on the ballot box picture had been received here.

Prime Minister Stalin had been expected in Moscow to make a radio speech on the eve of the election, but did not. No explanation has been given.

Protestant Group Assails Anti-Semitism

New York, March 23 (AP).—A powerful Protestant committee, announcing what was termed the first "common strategy" for Christian-Jewish relations, today called for an "all-out" battle against anti-Semitism and urged efforts to convert Jews to Christianity.

"Wherever anti-Semitism thrives Christianity cannot long survive," the committee said in a "declaration of principles." It called anti-Semitism "absolutely irreconsilable" with Christianity.

The committee includes representatives of Protestant agencies supported by 50 denominations with 27 million members.

Dr. Conrad Hoffman, New York Presbyterian minister, is the committee's executive secretary.

He said the declaration represented "the first time a widely representative group of Protestant leaders have agreed on a common strategy and plan of action dealing with Christian-Jewish relations."

The newly-formed group, named the American Committee on the Christian Approach to the Jews includes members from these interdenominational agencies:

Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Home Missions Council of North America, Foreign Missions Conference of North America, and the International Missionary Council.

Rise in Tax Rate Argued In Arlington

The Arlington Civic Federation continued debate until early this morning on whether or not to back the proposed 20-cent increase in Arlington's $3.45 tax rate.

The increase has been held necessary to support the proposed 1951 school and general county budgets submitted to the Arlington County Board.

Malcolm D. Miller, chairman of the organization's Revenues and Expenditures Committee, charged the increase is not necessary because of "hidden revenues." These exist, he claimed, because of a higher county evaluation than set forth in the budgets and also because the percentage of tax collected will be higher than estimated.

The committee recommended two positions: 1. That the present tax rate be maintained, or 2. That it approve the increase but, pointing out the "hidden revenues," ask that the additional money be used for unbudgeted improvements.

Alan Dean, representing the Fairlington Citizens Association, called the committee's recommendation to continue the present rate "a disappointing and timid document."

Sentences Suspended For 2 Union Officials

Luray, Va., March 23 (AP).—Judge Earl L. Abbott in Page County Circuit Court today suspended, on payment of fines, jail sentences imposed on two union officials for contempt of court. The charges grew out of a prolonged strike at the Virginia Oak Tannery.

Ike Kostrow of Philadelphia and Bernard Woolis of New York, both officials of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union, were sentenced to one year and six months, respectively, and fined $500 and $250, respectively, on November 12, 1948, for contempt of the court's injunction restricting the picketing of the struck plant.

The two men lost in their effort to appeal the case to the State Supreme Court.

Rep. Smith To Run Again

Democratic Representative Howard W. Smith, dean of Virginia Congressmen, announced yesterday he would be a candidate for reelection to his eleventh term from the Eighth District.

Meanwhile, Arthur F. Souther, 32-year-old Arlington attorney, last night announced he again will oppose Smith.

Souther, vice chairman of the Eighth District Young Democratic Club, ran against Smith in the 1948 congressional elections. He lives at 632 19th st., S. Arlington.

In a statement tossing his hat into the August Democratic primary, Smith said:

"I hope that through my long experience in Congress I may be of some service to my country in this time when we are confronted with great problems in both our domestic and foreign policies."

A banker and farmer in private life, Smith has served continually since 1931 and is now a member of the House Rules and District Committees.

Chinese Living in South Asia Worry U. S. As Red Targets

Chinese communities in southeast Asia are becoming dangerous centers of Communist penetration, according to reports that are causing concern in Government offices here.

The three million Chinese in Siam, the two million in Indonesia, the 500,000 in the city of Singapore alone, are reported to be easy targets for Communist pressure and therefore a serious problem for the non-Communist nations where they live.

Official observers in the Far East have found the Communists using the same tactics of intimidation Hitler used on Germans living in neighboring countries before the war. The local Chinese are told that unless they support the Communists their relatives in China will suffer reprisals.

Those who are merchants—and there are thousands of them in southeast Asian cities—are threatened also with loss of their trade with China, on which many of them depend. The result is that many of these unoffending Chinese are doing the Communists' bidding.

Their attitude is described as the hopeless one of saying "there's nothing much you can do about it." The chief exception recently was in Singapore, where British authorities forbade subscriptions to the Chinese Communist "victory loan." This made rich Chinese in Singapore happy, because it gave them an easy excuse for hot subscribing.

Communist use of the local Chinese threatens a serious situation in Siam, where there are no Communists except local Chinese and the large staff of the Soviet Embassy in Bangkok.

Dock workers in Siam happen to be Chinese; the rice crop, Siam's greatest export, has to move by sea; and Chinese Communists therefore are in a position to hold the pistol of dock strikes at Siam's head.

Offsetting this Communist activity, according to official reports, is the dislike of Chinese felt in varying degree among the neighboring peoples.

It is said to be especially strong in Indo-China and has been deepened by broadcasts from the Communist radio in Peiping recalling that Indo-China used to be part of the Chinese Empire.

Dislike of the Chinese is said also to be strong in Malaya and Indonesia, and also in Burma because of Chinese Communist talk of "liberating" Tibet, just across the Himalayan border.

Fred Waring Show Delights Constitution Hall Audience

By Paul Hume

I took the night off last night and went over to see and hear the Fred Waring show.

Night off? There was Constitution Hall, packed to the roof. There I was in the same seats where I hear the Philadelphia Orchestra or Jascha Heifetz.

But the stage—there was the difference. On the stage was one of the best glee clubs in the country. And an orchestra of 30, counting two pianos and the kitchen stuff (drums, bells, gongs and so on):

And soloists—soprano, tenor, baritone—some popular singers—and Lumpy. Lumpy plays a hot bass but mostly he just talks.

Why was I there? Because Fred Waring has consistently exerted a power in his field that has reached right into some of our higher musical circles. Nearly 20 years ago his glee club was setting standards for choral singing that our leading choirmasters and singers began to listen to. And after they listened awhile, they began to imitate it, if they could.

Those Waring signs are simple: perfect enunciation from every singer and beautiful singing. Today you find choir directors and leaders of our better college outfits working to put these Waring traits into their charges.

There is a school in summer where Waring passes on his arts. His influence in good music circles in this country surpasses that of any other man who has remained in the popular field.

Permanent Rank Of Rear Admiral Set for Hoskins

President Truman yesterday nominated for the permanent rank of Rear Admiral an officer who lost his first ship the day before he assumed command.

He is temporary Rear. Admiral John M. Hoskins, who won a Navy Cross and lost one foot trying to save the aircraft carrier Princeton in the Battle of Leyte Gulf in the Philippines in 1944.

Hoskins went aboard the Princeton on October 23 to take command the next day. That was the day the Japanese Navy struck its last major blow in the war. The Princeton was hit by bombs.. Hoskins helped fight fire until wounded. Hoskins now commands Carrier Division 3 in the Pacific. His flagship, the Valley Forge, is due to join the Seventh Fleet in the Western Pacific in May.

BILL ROBINSON was doing his stint on the stage of a Chicago theater one night during the war when he spied a dancing protege of several years before Stopping the show, he called Danny Hoctor (now at the Mayflower) to the stage to perform with him.

In a service outfit, with GI theless went through the routines with his old teacher. Turnwith his old teacher. Turing to Robnson, he said—"Remember ing to Robinson, he said—"Remember this?"

With hands in pockets, Hoctor began Robinson's famous impressions of "Lady Crossing the Street." Robinson, connulsed with the mimicry of his own special act, turned to the audience: "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "this is the first time you've seen me in black and white."

One of the best tappers that have come to Washington, Hoctor began his work under Robinson with the Lancastershire Clog. It's a tapping technique named after the people of Lancastershire, England, who wore wooden shoes and performed dances in them at fairs. Robinson always used it. Hoctor still loves to wear the wooden shoes, but says the waxed floors of today's night clubs "goeth before a fall."

Betty Byrd, his cute and vivacious wife, is a ballerina. She played in "Song of Norway," "Are You With It," and did concert ballet work before they teamed up. In "Call Me Mister," where Danny was an actor (he also sings) and assistant dance director, and Betty a ballerina, they decided to "set" an act of their own.

The Hotel Pierre, in New York, was their first engagement. From there, with the help of a big Life magazine spread, they have been hitting the leading hotel and night club rooms and doing television shows. Chesterfield Supper Club was a regular spot for the team until the present tour. The two will be at the Mayflower Lounge until April 1st.

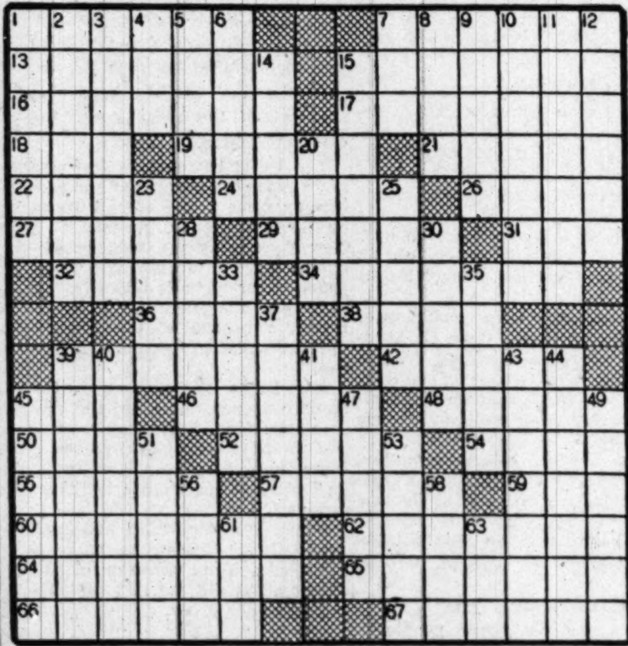
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER



Senate Will Vote Wednesday On Kerr Natural Gas Measure

The Senate agreed yesterday to vote at 4 p. m. Wednesday, March 29, on the House-approved Kerr bill to exempt "independent" natural gas producers from Federal rate control.

The agreement was proposed by Senator Ernest W. McFarland, (D., Ariz.) a supporter of the bill.

The plan calls for an equal division of talking time between backers and foes of the bill.

The measure would slam the door on Federal control of prices charged by gas producers who are independent of interstate pipeline companies that take the gas to consumers in cities.

Its supporters say Federal rate control of gas producers was not intended when the gas act was passed in 1938. They fear that a recent Supreme Court ruling might permit such control.

Opponents, led by Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.), assert that the measure would mean unwarranted profits for the gas producers and higher prices for consumers.

Senator Robert S. Kerr (D., Okla.), an oil company owner, is the chief sponsor of the Senate bill. Other leading backers are McFarland and Senators Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.), and Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.).

Several Republicans have joined the bulk of Administration forces in opposition to the measure.

Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.), one of them, said the "only practical way" to regulate natural gas rates is through a Federal agency. He said Oklahoma and Kansas recently pushed up the price of natural gas.

"I believe the consuming States should be represented as well," he said.

For the Information of Official Washington

For a Review of the Ellen Knauff Case

THIS EDITORIAL has to do with the perplexing case of Ellen Knauff to which the Post-Dispatch has devoted many news articles, editorials and cartoons in the past two months. The case of this German war bride of an American combat veteran is as important as it is puzzling.

The Attorney General's summary order to exclude and deport Mrs. Knauff, who is held at Ellis Island as a risk to this country, puts her rights as a human being into head-on conflict with what the Department of Justice says is national security.

The question is: Under the Bill of Rights, which protects aliens as well as citizens, does not this little woman, many of whose relatives were killed in Hitler's persecution of Jews, deserve to know the specific charge against her?

Is she not entitled to a fair hearing on that charge? Should not this former employe of the RAF in England and the American Army of Occupation in Germany be confronted with specific accusations? And cannot these constitutional guarantees be accorded to her without disclosing really vital sources of information, and without endangering the nation?

This conflict embraces a basic issue in democratic government. It is also an issue full of human emotions. For if Ellen Knauff cannot be admitted to the United States, then her husband, Kurt Knauff, must give up his country in order to live with his wife. How could a choice be harder?

What a Commission Could Do

Because we think this case deserves more attention than it has received, the Post-Dispatch herewith reviews the case step by step and recommends the appointment of a commission of perhaps three distinguished citizens to look into the facts—in secret, should that be necessary. If the Attorney General is justified in excluding Mrs. Knauff without holding a hearing and without telling her why, such a commission could check the circumstances and report this conclusion to the country as a considered judgment.

So far the necessity for excluding Mrs. Knauff has not been made clear. Unless it is made clear, there will always remain the strong possibility that the exclusion was not necessary to national security, but was a cover-up to hide a bureaucratic mistake.

The Post-Dispatch does not say that the Department of Justice may not have facts which make it unsafe to admit Mrs. Knauff. There may be in her past an act which would prove her to be untrustworthy. But the haste with which the immigration officials tried to get her on a boat and started back to Germany suggests also the possibility that she may be the victim of a system which is trying to avoid a confession of error.

Twists and Turns of Two Months

Here are the twists and turns of the case in the last two months:

Jan. 16—The Supreme Court, by vote of 4-to-3, upheld the exclusion order, in a decision by Justices Vinson, Reed, Burton and Minton. Justices Jackson, Black and Frankfurter dissented vigorously. Justice Jackson denounced the plea of the Attorney General "that evidence must be secret" as "abhorrent to free men." Describing the procedure "as dangerously wrong in principle," he said: "I should direct the Attorney General either to produce his evidence justifying exclusion or to admit Mrs. Knauff to the country." Justice Frankfurter, alarmed by the "greater hazards of the informer's tale, without any opportunity for its refutation," said that "considerations of national security, insofar as they are pertinent, can be protected by a hearing in camera."

Jan. 18—The Post-Dispatch printed a leading editorial, entitled "The Case of Ellen Knauff." The editorial predicted that "this ruling will some day be reversed." It described the spectacle of Justice Jackson severely criticizing the conduct of one of his successors in the office of Attorney General, Tom Clark, now a Justice, as "one of the most unusual in Supreme Court history."

Feb. 3—Senator William Langer, North Dakota Republican, introduced a bill proposing that the Attorney General be directed to "cancel any outstanding order of exclusion." The bill also proposed that Mrs. Knauff be permitted "immediate entry" into the United States. In accordance with custom, it was expected that hearings would be held before any further steps were taken to return Mrs. Knauff to Germany.

Reversal by Immigration Officials

Feb. 10—Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., New York Democrat, made public a letter to Attorney General McGrath expressing "concern" over "the grave civil liberties questions involved." Representative Roosevelt said that he was disturbed because "Mrs. Knauff was denied a hearing before a board of special inquiry" to which she "might have presented evidence which would have cleared her of whatever charges there are against her." Representative Roosevelt, who is vice president of President Truman's Committee on Civil Rights, proposed that the Attorney General reconsider the wartime executive regulation under which aliens may be barred without hearings.

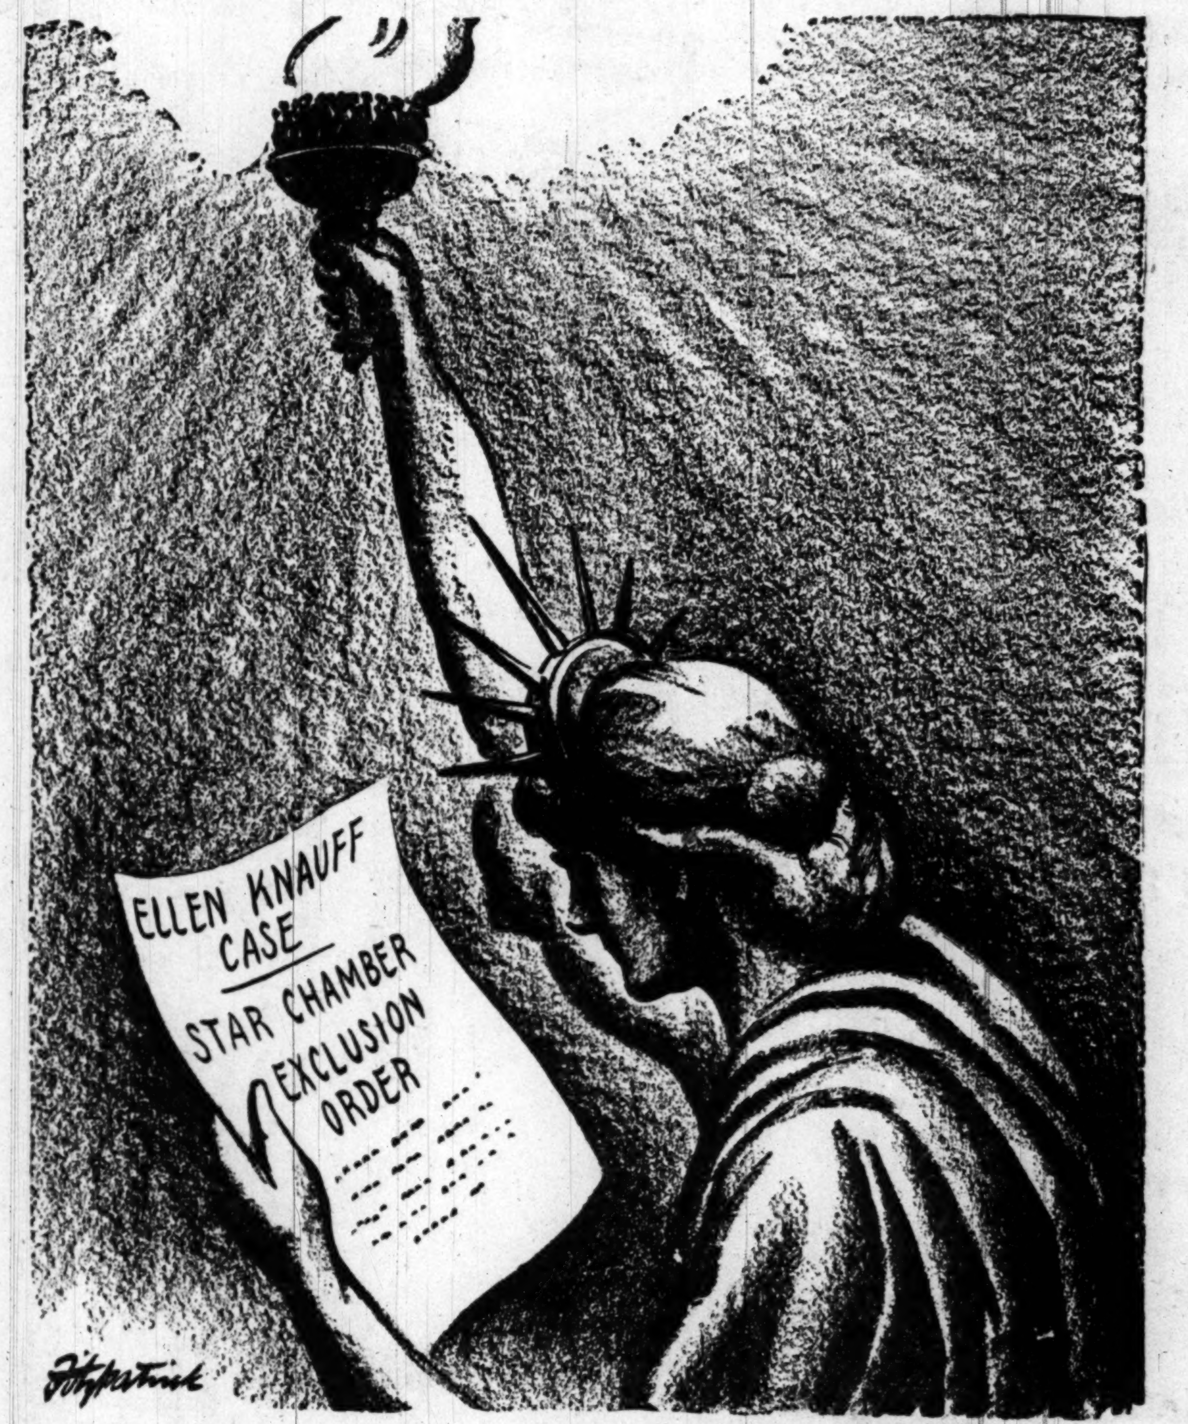
Feb. 15—William Farrell, Immigration Service director of information, said that Mrs. Knauff's deportation was being stayed in accordance with practice as a courtesy to Congress. This was a recognition of the bill introduced by Senator Langer. It also seemed an assurance that no hasty attempt would be made to return Mrs. Knauff to Germany before hearings on pending legislation.

Feb. 23—Immigration authorities arrested Mrs. Knauff in New York and returned her to Ellis Island where she had been held for eight months before release on bond. Prior to this, the immigration officials had brought pressure on Senator Langer to persuade him to withdraw his bill. Senator Langer agreed to withdraw.

Deportation Stayed by Court

Feb. 27—Watson B. Miller, Commissioner of Immigration, announced that Mrs. Knauff would be deported on the following day. Asked why there was this break with the custom of staying deportation until action on a bill, Commissioner Miller said exceptions were made "in cases we believe may involve internal security or espionage." Mrs. Knauff was ordered to the Army Transport Gen. Maurice Rose in New York. Senator Langer changed his mind and announced that he would not withdraw his bill. This followed a conference with Representative Roosevelt who told Senator Langer that if Langer withdrew his bill, he (Roosevelt) would introduce a bill to the same purpose.

Feb. 28—New York District Director of Immigration Edward J. Shaughnessy declared: "There has to be a finality in every case. This one has dragged on long enough. She is not the type of person wanted in this country. And that is all there is to it." With Judge Learned Hand presiding, the United States Court of Appeals at New York stayed Mrs. Knauff's deportation until further court action Mar. 6. The Immigration Service returned Mrs. Knauff from the pier to Ellis Island. The ship sailed without her. President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson were presented with Post-Dispatch editorials and news articles on the case.



STRANGE DOCTRINE IN LIBERTY'S LIGHT

—From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of March 23, 1950.

Mar. 1—Representative Roosevelt announced the introduction of an amendment to the passport laws to guarantee a hearing for "any alien who has arrived in this country." He asked Attorney General McGrath and Immigration Commissioner Miller to postpone deportation of Mrs. Knauff until his measure could be considered. He told the Department of Justice he was deeply concerned with the fundamental issue of "securing the most protection for our civil liberties tradition that is consistent with national security."

Mar. 6—Presiding Judge Hand and Judges Frank and Swan of the Federal Court of Appeals at New York, agreed to review the Attorney General's deportation order. In agreeing to this review, the court rejected the vigorous arguments of David McKibbon, chief of the civil division of the United States Attorney's office in New York. This review was expected to halt deportation proceedings for several weeks.

A Third Bill Is Introduced

Mar. 7—Representative Francis E. Walter, Pennsylvania Democrat, chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, introduced a private bill to require the Attorney General to cancel the exclusion order. Representative Roosevelt told the House that the Knauff case raised a civil liberties question that is "serious and immediate." He commended the Post-Dispatch, the New York Times and the New York Post for their interest in the case.

Mar. 16—Mrs. Knauff's lawyer, Gunther Jacobson, proposed to the House Judiciary subcommittee, through a letter to Representative Walter, that she be subpenaed for a hearing. He wrote that he is "convinced the government has no evidence against this young woman and that she is entirely innocent of any political activities."

Such is the confused and contradictory record of the perplexing case of Ellen Knauff in the two months since the Supreme Court's narrow decision against her admission as a war bride. From this record, no ordinary citizen can be sure that national security is at stake. Neither can the citizen be sure that human rights are not being ignored.

Let the Doubts Be Removed

The Post-Dispatch, therefore, proposes the appointment of a commission of eminent citizens to investigate the facts and report to the country. We do not presume to nominate the panel from which such a commission might be chosen. However, we believe it would be reassuring if the commission contained men of the stature of former President Hoover, Gen. Eisenhower and Gen. Bradley, former Secretary of State Marshall, former Secretary of War Stimson, President Conant of Harvard, Bishop Oxnam and Cardinal Spellman.

We believe that a commission of citizens of this distinction, if called on to review the facts, would take the assignment for the important civic responsibility which it would be.

If the Department of Justice has a convincing case against Mrs. Knauff, let that be made plain, let the case be ended and let her be returned to Germany.

But if there is no convincing case, let the country be so informed, the exclusion proceedings stopped and Mrs. Knauff admitted to the United States as the wife of a former G.I. under the War Brides Act.

The Post-Dispatch urges the President, whose executive authority is involved throughout this case, to lift the issue to its highest level. We urge him to say, in effect, with all the prestige of his great office, that Ellen Knauff deserves better than star-chamber treatment at the hands of the United States Government.

Many Americans would applaud Mr. Truman were he to do so. It would be an act characteristic of the President's best qualities.

D. C. Auto Sales Increase 20% In February

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington sales of new automobiles spurted to 2207 in February, a new postwar high for that month and 20 percent higher than the 1829 in the same 1949 period.

This brought sales here to 4341 in the first two months of this year, as compared with 4097 in the like period last year, according to figures supplied by the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

How much of the February sales upsurge was due to the auto show, held in the latter part of the month, cannot be estimated. However, dealers feel that the show's full effects will be reflected this month and later.

Meanwhile, R. L. Polk & Co., statisticians for the auto industry, said early computations indicate that new passenger car registrations for this year's first quarter probably will top those of the same 1949 period.

Incomplete tabulations show a January total of 377,000 and a February figure of 390,000. No figures are yet available for March but the heavy spring buying season traditionally gets under way this month.

This year's figures compare with 273,161 in January, 1949, and 274,978 for February, 1949. In March a year ago 360,584 new passenger cars were registered.

She became an agent in April, 1946, because of the extended illness of her husband, Richard L. Smith, now recovered and again a salesman for Peoples Life. Working for the Waldorf District covering Southern Maryland counties, Mrs. Smith ranked third in 1948 sales and eleventh in 1949 production. Her record for the past two years is $375,314 in placed ordinary and industrial insurance ($60.08 a week in industrial increase and $303,218 in new ordinary insurance.)

Profit Taking Drops Stocks After Upturn

New York, March 23 (AP).—The stock market weathered a heavy pounding by selling forces today.

The market got off to a good start when an opening burst of demand pushed prices up fractions to more than a point. That was as far as the advance got.

For the rest of the session prices were subjected to constant profit-taking sales which clipped the highs of the day and forced numerous leaders into the minus column.

American Telephone, a favorite lately and one of the limited number of shares to close at a 1949-50 high, was in demand through the session. The final price was up 1⅜ at 155⅛.

Radio-television issues bounced all over the place. Zenith Radio jumped more than three points at one time but ended 2¼ up at 58. Admiral was ahead a full point for a while but finished ⅜ up at 27⅛.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—Price trends in grains were confused today by closing out of the March contracts. For the most part dealings were slow, but volume expanded toward the close as liquidation entered March wheat and soybeans.

All March deliveries ended lower except corn, with the widest loss being shown by soybeans. March wheat ended ⅛ to 1⅛ lower; March corn, ⅛ to 1 cent higher; March oats, ⅞ to 1 cent lower and March lard, 3 to 15 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Deferred wheat contracts ended ½ to ¾ higher; corn unchanged to ⅜ lower; oats, ⅛ to ⅜ higher; rye, 1¼ to 1½ lower; soybeans, ¼ to 1¼ lower and lard 2 to 5 cents a hundred pounds lower.

There is NO All-Purpose Investment!

WHAT'S A GOOD INVESTMENT for the next fellow may be bad for you. What's a good investment for you today may not be tomorrow.

WHY?

Because investment values change. That's as true of real estate or insurance or any other investment as it is of securities. Changing money values alone can alter the comparative attractiveness of one investment with another.

Because the market changes. Sometimes it's up, sometimes it's down.

Because you change—your investment situation changes. Sometimes you can afford a greater risk in the hope of a greater reward. Sometimes you can't.

So if anybody tries to sell you an investment that's supposed to be all things to all men—yesterday, today, and forever—well just remember . . .

There is no all-purpose investment, none that you can buy and forget about. In the end, investment success depends on your own judgment, your own vigilance. And you can't buy that in a packaged plan.

Business Outlook

Romance Flies Out Window As Newspaper Costs Soar

By J. A. Livingston

ROMANCE has been too much for the newspaper business. The names of great editors and great reporters survive, while newspapers like the New York Sun or the old New York World pass on—hostages to the unemotional pressure of the profit-and-loss account.

The young hopeful in high school or college romanticizes about Horace Greeley, Charles Dana, Joseph Pulitzer, Richard Harding Davis, Irvin S. Cobb, or Henry Stanley, who found Livingstone in Africa and was knighted by the British government.

Livingston

He thinks of being another Walter Lippman, Floyd Gibbons, Ernie Pyle, Raymond Clapper, or Ed Murrow. He's seldom captured by the necessary but inglorious business side of the business—making ends meet. Dollars and cents are for the businessman, not for the newspaperman!

As a reporter or editor, you meet so many interesting people. You get valuable experience, fine for writing the great American novel. And, like Arthur Krock, you might even get an exclusive interview with the President of the United States. Who knows?

The consequence is that most men who have run newspapers have been editors and reporters, interested more in what goes into print than in how much it costs to print it. Yet a newspaper office is a factory. You take newsprint as a raw material, put words on it, and distribute those words.

AND NOW costs are beginning to count. Newsprint prices have doubled in the last 10 years. Ditto printers' hourly wages. More and more publishers have been forced, by dollar-and-cents, to think as manufacturers, not as publishers and editors.

The Boston Herald-Traveler Corp. ilustrates the point. This is one of the few newspapers that releases its financial reports. Last year the company's revenue from circulation and advertising rose 5.9 percent, to $15,641,000, but its operating expenses rose 8.5 percent, to $14,300,000. After taxes and miscellaneous expenses, net income was down 19 percent to $754,000. That on the highest advertising and circulation revenue in the company's history!

As Roger P. Talmadge, treasurer, told stockholders: "Our own margin of profit, along with that of the rest of the newspaper industry, has been declining in recent years. In some cases (the most recent being the New York Sun) this decline has been more serious." At $14,300,000 today, the Herald Traveler's expenses are almost three times what they were in 1934.

THE NEWSPAPER industry is looking around for economies. The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution recently combined. The Fort Wayne News-Sentinel and Journal-Gazette joined their business operations as many other papers have done.

The remarkable fact about newspaper publishing is that no major technological advance in printing has occurred since the invention of the linotype machine some 60 years ago. Sure, there have been minor improvements, but nothing to compare with what has taken place in manufacturing steel, or processing metals, or weaving textiles.

That's partly because editorially minded publishers, up till now, have not taken a lively interest in the manufacturing process, itself. Also because labor-management agreements militated against major technological changes. Even if an improved, speedier process of printing were found, union contracts would prevent getting maximum economies out of the investment. Another reason is that the competition in the manufacture of printing equipment is limited. Only two companies, Intertype and Mergenthaler, make linotype machines.

BUT NOW newspaper publishers are actively backing new developments. Electronic and photographic devices are being tried out to see if the elaborabe printing machinery now required to get out a newspaper may be reduced. Some publishers go so far as to assert that the entire printing process is on the threshold of a five- or ten-year technological revolution. The day may not be far off when it won't take millions of dollars to start up a daily newspaper in a fair-sized city.

If the revolution succeds, the savings will be great enough to justify investing in the equipment and working out new agreements with labor unions, especially the International Typographical Union. What's more, the revolution will force manufacturers of present-day equipment to join the technological parade. Which is what happens in any business—when romance flies out the window and cost accountants climb in.

Many Believed Evading Law On Lobbying

Chairman Frank Buchanan, (D., Pa.), of the special congressional committee investigating lobbying said yesterday that only about 500 of the estimated 1500 lobbying groups in this country have registered with Congress.

He said 2000 individuals have registered, compared with an estimated 10,000 that should be registered.

Buchanan gave the figures in an address at a National Press Club luncheon. Lobbying groups are required by law to register with Congress and explain their activities, income and spending.

Buchanan's committee plans to start public hearings Monday on the operation of the present lobbying act. He said the committee plans to do "an objective job, constructive in nature, that will result in improvements."

The first witness the committee will hear is Hadley Cantril, director of the office of public opinion research at Princeton University.

Buchanan said he considers lobbying "necessary and essential." The purpose of the investigation, he said, is to improve the law covering lobbying.

He said the committee already has uncovered some "irregularities" in the operation of the present law, but it will be left to the Justice Department to determine whether there have been actual violations.

Virginia Accepts 'Corn War' Challenge

Hopewell, Va., March 23 (AP).—Virginia tonight accepted North Carolina's challenge to another "corn war."

"Governor Scott of North Carolina some time ago—when Virginia was celebrating its victory of 1949—challenged the Old Dominion to a new corn growing contest in 1950. I accept the challenge," Governor Battle told the Prince George County 100 bushel per acre corn club and members of the local chamber of commerce.

"You will recall Virginia had an average per acre yield last year of 47 bushels, compared with North Carolina's 35," Battle continued. "Our farmers can substantially increase that average this year, and I am sure that they have no hesitancy in joining in acceptace of the North Carolina challenge."

Pest Controllers Meet

Dr. S. A. Rowher, assistant chief of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, will be principal speaker at a joint meeting of the Washington and Virginia pest control associations at 7 tonight in the Terrace Room at National Airport.

Wood, Avery Give Views on Outlook

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—Merchants today had two conflicting opinions on the business outlook to puzzle over. They came from the heads of the Nation's two largest retail sales organizations.

Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., yesterday said, "We wouldn't be spending money if we thought a collapse was inevitible." The firm has spent $238,196,000 in expansion since the end of the war.

Sewell Avery, chairman of Montgomery Ward & Co., recently said, "Personally, I have been waiting for years for the ax to fall, and I am becoming more convinced momentarily that it is not far away."

Congressmen Seek Protection of Workers Fired for Security

A determined move is underway in Congress to give additional protection to Federal employes who are fired on security charges.

Most members of the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee yesterday agreed with employe leaders who opposed the bill because it failed to give accused employes full appeal rights. Representative Gross (R., Iowa), summed up the feeling when he said:

"I'm opposed to further delegations of this type of power to the department heads and the President. It isn't compatible with our form of Government."

Representative Ed Rees of Kansas, ranking GOP committee member, commented that the bill would allow the agency head to be both the accuser and judge of the employe. "The bill must be amended," he said, "to give additional protection to the employe."

Three spokesmen for AFL unions—George D. Riley, Thomas G. Walters, and Charles I. Stengle—suggested the bill be amended to provide: (1) an appeal by employes to an impartial review board, and (2) full pay for accused employes who are cleared on appeal.

Francis M. Sullivan, speaking for the Disabled American Veterans, told the committee the bill "might lead to abuses that would be regretted." The spokesman for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Omar B. Ketchum, testified that "dangers are implicit in a system of summary action that does not preserve the right of appeal to an impartial body."

Ray Hallbeck of the AFL's postal clerks, asked the committee to write a definition of national security into the bill, and to designate the agencies that could have the summary firing power.

Chairman Murray (D., Tenn.) said the Administration-backed bill is intended to give the heads of sensitive agencies the power to fire drunks and other employes regraded as security risks.

The bill would give this power to the heads of Defense agencies, the Treasury, Atomic Energy Commission, National Security Resources Board, and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. It would give the President the authority to extend it to other agency heads.

The House Appropriations Committee voted to give the Commerce Secretary this sweeping power over his 46,000 employes.

The bill would require that employes holding permanent appointments be given a written statement of charges against them and a reasonable time to answer them. The agency heads wouldn't be forced to give them a hearing.

Most of the agencies involved have been operating under similar but temporary legislation for the past several years. The Administration bill would be permanent legislation.

RATINGS: A new bill to streamline the Government's efficiency rating system was introduced yesterday by Chairman Murray of the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee. The bill provides:

Possible ratings of excellent, satisfactory, and unsatisfactory. An employe would have to be warned 90 days in advance and told in detail where he was falling down in his work before he could be given an unsatisfactory rating.

The employe who was given an excellent or satisfactory rating would be in line for an automatic in-grade promotion. He wouldn't have to get a statement of satisfactory conduct in addition from his supervisors as proposed by Civil Service.

The present employe appeal system would be retained. Civil Service wants to limit appeals to one impartial review. All agencies would be required to have a rating system under the Murray bill. It would be optional with the agencies under the commission proposal.

NOTES: Douglas J. McFarlane has been appointed chief of Atomic Energy's business operations branch. He transferred from the Munitions Board where he worked in the logistics field . . . Harry L. Weeks has been appointed supply officer of VA's regional office here. He succeeds Bernard H. Lammers who transferred to a similar post at Mount Alto Hospital . . .

Area Milk Prices Drop Cent April 1

This is the result of an order yesterday by the Virginia State Milk Commission cutting the price on street sales of milk in the Arlington-Alexandria area a penny starting April 1.

Virginia is the only nearby area under milk price control, but a reduction there is usually followed by a price cut in the District and nearby Maryland.

Yesterday, the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Inc., said the producer price of milk will also be cut to District and Maryland firms, thus assuring a retail reduction in those areas.

The State Commsision in Richmond imposed the penny cut on various types of milk, including that with the cream on top, homogenized, buttermilk and chocolate milk. The order does not apply to cream, cottage cheese or ice cream.

The producer price will be reduced on April 1 by 46 cents per hundredweight, bringing the price to $5.60 plus premiums. The present price of delivered milk is 21½ cents in Greater Washington and store prices range from about 19 to 21 cents.

The Virginia order was the result of an all-day hearing in Alexandria by the commission on March 1. Three dairies then asked for a 1½-cent cut, while the Milk Producers Association proposed a 1-cent reduction on April 1.

A check with several area dairies brought these reports:

Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy—Penny cut to all customers in Greater Washington April 1.

Embassy Dairy—Penny cut to all customers in area April 1.

Highland Farms Dairy, Inc., operators of High's stores—"Our policy is to meet competition," said Clifford Y. Stephens, owner.

Wakefield Dairy—If producer price is cut, penny reduction throughout area.

Operators of several other dairies had not yet received notice of the reduction and therefore had no comment.

Over Bridge

S. Capitol St. Bus Service Is Approved

Capital Transit Co. will start a rush-hour regular-fare express bus route over the South Capitol st. bridge April 3.

Authority to establish the new route then between downtown Washington and Livingston Manor near the District Line was granted yesterday by the District Public Utilities Commission.

CTC officials says the express will save 15 minutes for passengers making the full six-mile trip. In the four miles on South Capitol st. between D st., and Nichols ave. only three stops were authorized—M st., at the Naval Photo Laboratory at Firth Sterling ave., and at Portland st.

Capital Transit announced it will run the buses at 10-to-15 minute intervals. They will leave the terminal off 3rd st. se. between 7 a. m. and 8:30 a. m. and from 10th st. and Pennsylvania ave., nw., between 4:35 p. m. and 6:10 p. m., the company stated.

Truck Driver Dies After He Is Stricken

John Elmer Dement, 41, a truck driver for the District sanitation division, collapsed in his truck yesterday and died shortly afterward in the division's garage at 917 Naylor ct. nw.

A helper, Clarence Turner, took over controls when Dement collapsed, not far from the garage, and hurried there with the vehicle. He and George K. Schuerger, shop foreman, took Dement into the office and called police.

Dr. R. F. Donohoe, of Gallinger Hospital, pronounced Dement dead when an ambulance arrived.

Dement lived at 660 Kenyon st. nw. Schuerger said that Dement was a veteran of war service in Africa, where he also drove a truck. While in a convoy which was attacked by Arabs, Schuerger said, Dement was stabbed close to the heart, but recovered.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald will perform an autopsy today to determine the cause of Dement's death.

Eugene Savitz, 41, of 602 Woodside pkwy., Silver Spring, Md., was struck by a hit-run automobile shortly before 1 a. m. yesterday on Piney Branch rd. near Dale dr., Silver Spring. Montgomery County police said Savitz was able to give them a portion of the license tag number.

Savitz was admitted to Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, for treatment of injuries to the right hip. His condition was reported "fairly good."

In another accident, John Wesley of 66 Callan st. ne., a 28-year-old division of sanitation employe, fell from a truck in the rear alley at 768 Morton st. nw. The right truck wheel passed over his right arm. He was admitted to Providence Hospital with a fractured elbow.

Bartender Fined $300 In Sunday Liquor Sale

A Hyattsville bartender was fined $300 by Judge Alan Bowie in the Hyattsville Police Court yesterday for selling liquor on Sundays.

The bartender, Harold P. Kelly, jr., 29, of 4108 53d ave., Hyattsville, pleaded guilty to a violation February 19 at the Tick Tock Tavern, University lane and Riggs rd., Prince Georges County, not far from the District line.

Worker Is Buried To His Shoulders In Bethesda Cavein

A 52-year-old construction worker suffered a fractured pelvis, leg bruises and shock when a cavein buried him to his shoulders, in Bethesda, yesterday.

He is Nick Ricci of 1508 Ballard st., Silver Spring. Police said he was employed by the Leo Butler Co., at a job on Greentree rd., near Ewing drive. A 10-foot ditch had filled with water, police said, and was being pumped out.

Ricci, they said, went into the ditch to clear the screen of the pump intake, when the cavein occurred. The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad extricated him and took him to Suburban Hospital.

Maryland Day To Be Quiet in 2 Area Counties

Saturday will be just another day in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties this year, despite the fact that it's Maryland Day.

No formal celebrations are planned in either county, and since Saturday is normally a day off for school children and county employes there won't even be that to mark the anniversary.

The Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. announced that it will not open Saturday for its half-day as usual. Instead, the bank's five branches will be open from 4 to 5:30 p. m. today.

The day commemorates the landing of the first colonists on St. Clements Island, St. Marys County, in 1634.

A graduate of A.U. in 1939, Thompson took his master's degree from Columbia University in 1941. 2 Bills Boost D. C.'s Service Schools Quota

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday approved bills to increase the allotment of District cadets at West Point from 6 to 12 and midshipmen at Annapolis from 5 to 15.

Committee Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) filed the bills in the Senate with reports asking approval. Similar bills have been blocked in earlier Congresses.

The bills were requested by the District Commissioners and Federal Defense and Budget Bureau officials reported they have no objections.

Reports filed by Senator Tydings estimated the District's permanent population at 600,000.

Even on the basis of the 600,000 population estimate, the District is far below its quota in comparison with the number of cadets and midshipmen from the smaller States.

The report said that Nevada, with 141,000 population, has 12 cadets at West Point, and Maine with a population of about 600,000 has 20. The report said that Delaware and Vermont, with populations below 400,000, each are allowed 15 midshipmen at Annapolis, in comparison with the District's 5.

The figure of 600,000 permanent District residents is based on the Commissioners' estimate, and it assumes that some 200,000 of the District residents living here have voting residences elsewhere. The State population figures were estimated as of July 1, 1948.

Police Relieve Goodwill People Of 2 'Hot' Shells

Two "hot" mortar shells, collected by a Goodwill Industries truck, were removed by the police bomb squad without incident yesterday.

The World War II shells were four inches in diameter and 16 inches long, according to bomb squad head Lieut. Sheldon R. McKee. They are armed by centrifugal force and explode only on impact, McKee said, and could not have exploded without a fire.

McKee said he took the shells from GI headquarters at 1238 New Hampshire ave., nw., to a country gravel pit for future disposal.

County Jury Indicts 3 in Tax Evasion

Federal Workers Failed to File Income Returns, State Charges

Three Federal Government employes yesterday were indicted by the Montgomery County grand jury for failure to file Maryland State income tax returns.

The action set a precedent in the county, officials said. Identity of those charged was withheld pending their arrests on bench warrants slated to be issued today.

State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson disclosed that he had intended to present evidence showing failure to file against six other Federal employes. But, he said, the cases were dropped when belated returns were filed by some and he was unable to get salary information from the employing agencies in the remaining instances.

The indictments were returned before Circuit Court Judge's Charles W. Woodward and Stedman Prescott in the county courthouse at Rockville, Md.

Grand Jury Indicts 3 Rockville Jail Escapees

Three youths who escaped from the Montgomery County jail at Rockville, Md., last January 30, yesterday were indicted on escape charges by the Montgomery County grand jury.

All of them were recaptured a few days after the break. They are John E. Coffin, 23, and Robert L. Caldwell, both of Carderock, Md., and Walter F. Williams, jr., 18, of 1116 F st. ne.

Coffin was also indicted on four counts of housebreaking and larceny and Caldwell on two counts of housebreaking and larceny.

They were awaiting action on the charges when they made the break. Williams is now serving a 3-year sentence for housebreaking.

Joseph A. Wagstaff, 24, of 5506 Grove st., Chevy Chase, Md.; Alfred S. DeAgro, jr., 18, of 8105 University la., Silver Spring, Md., and Leonard W. Lewis, 21, of 4623 Asbury pl. nw., were indicted for conspiracy to effect an escape from jail.

Police charged that on November 29 while Wagstaff was in the county jail awaiting sentence after an assault conviction, the other two youths attempted to smuggle hacksaw blades and whisky into his cell.

A total of 34 indictments was returned. The jury reported the county jail to be in "very good condition." The panel recommended installation of a mirror at the far end of the main corridor to enable a view of the wings from the corridor and two additional alarm controls.

Boy Drowns In Fish Pond

MARK OVERSTREET
Mother finds his body

Boy, 2, Falls In Pool Near Home, Drowns

A 2-year-old Kensington, Md., boy was drowned yesterday in a small pool in the back yard of a neighbor.

He was Mark Heath Overstreet, only son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Overstreet, 3302 Fayette st. The father is a civilian employe of the Air Force.

Mrs. Overstreet missed the boy shortly before 11 a. m. and began a search for him, enlisting the aid of neighbors. As they hunted, a Montgomery County police car, cruising in the neighborhood, was stopped and the two policemen joined the search.

At 11:40 a. m., Mrs. Overstreet found her son in the pool. It is about 3 by 5 feet, and contained about 18 inches of muddy water. Police said the boy's footprints led to the pool, and at the edge, where they reached it, a rock was dislodged. They theorized the child may have tripped and fallen into the water.

The Kensington Rescue Squad and Dr. Samuel Allen, a private physician, worked over the lad for 45 minutes attempting to revive him.

The pool is in the rear of the home of Joseph E. Ralph, 3304 Fayette st.

Woman Injured In Plunge From Fourth Floor

A 24-year-old woman plunged from the window of her fourth floor apartment about 9:50 o'clock last night, suffering leg and possible internal injuries.

Mrs. Freddie Lou Dickerson was taken to Emergency Hospital after Third Precinct police found her beneath her apartment window at 1736 18th st. nw.

According to police, the fall followed an argument with the woman's husband, Morris Henry Dickerson, 33.

All University Warned

Overdose of New 'Cold' Pills Nearly Kills U. of Md. Student

A University of Maryland student narrowly escaped death from an unthinking overdose of prescription-free antihistamine cold tablets, it was disclosed yesterday.

The victim, whose identity was withheld by school authorities, was found unconscious in his dormitory last week by fellow students.

Taken to the school infirmary, he was revived after one hour of heroic rescue measures, including artificial respiration and the injection of stimulants into his veins.

Dr. Harry A. Bishop, director of student health services at the university, said that had the student not been found when he was and the rescue measures had been delayed there is "the very, very strong possibility he would have died."

The episode was brought to light in a "Warning to Students" memorandum Dr. Bishop prepared for use in the university's student publication, The Diamondback.

The warning read, in part:

"You are warned that antihistaminics can be dangerous and may produce death in some cases if taken in overdoses. Your dose may be a small one. If you must take these drugs, follow scrupulously the directions given on the package."

Dr. Bishop emphasized that the "cold" pills taken were the prescription-free type, not the more potent antihistamines administered under doctor's orders. Manufacturers of the "cold-stopper" drugs have repeatedly stressed the safety of their products, but only when taken within dosage limitations as shown on the labels.

Myers Had Lipstick On Face, Court Told

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The face of Ralph W. Myers was "smeared red" with lipstick when he was found with the battered body of Nina Jean Campbell on the night of January 4.

This was the testimony of Mrs. Mabel Earnshaw yesterday in District Court, where Myers is on trial for performing an abortion which killed the 20-year-old mother of two.

Under a grueling, two-hour cross-examination, Mrs. Earnshaw also admitted she knew she was violating "the law of man and the law of God," when she arranged the abortion for her niece with Myers, a 44-year-old shade salesman.

She testified Wednesday and again yesterday that she contacted Myers January 3 because she "felt sorry" for Mrs. Campbell, who was three months pregnant with her third child and had been told she would be evicted if she had any more children.

Mrs. Earnshaw testified that she left her niece alone with Myers at 9 p. m., January 4, in an apartment at 1321 Fairmont st., nw.

Found Him Disheveled

"At that time he was dressed in shirt sleeves, but his hair was slicked back," she testified. "There had been no kissing going on and there was no lipstick on his face."

When she returned to the apartment 90 minutes later, "he was dressed the same, but his hair was hanging down around his face and his lips were smeared red all around here," Mrs. Earnshaw said, circling her mouth with her hand.

Mrs. Campbell was killed by an air embolism caused by a criminal abortion, according to the coroner's report. But in his opening statement to the jury of 10 men and two women Wednesday, prosecutor John C. Conliff said there were severe lacerations on her body, bruises and a concussion of the brain.

Quizzed on Personal Life

Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin spent three hours yesterday morning cross-examining Mrs. Earnshaw and Wilda Johnston, a Texas nurse who was present in the apartment just before the alleged abortion.

Laughlin cross-examined Mrs. Earnshaw on minute details of her personal life as well as her life on January 4.

Who did the cooking in her home, Laughlin asked.

Her husband, Mrs. Earnshaw said, blushing, and he washed the dishes too.

How was Mrs. Campbell dressed when she went for the abortion, Laughlin asked. Was she wearing new underwear? Mrs. Earnshaw could not remember.

Was Mrs. Earnshaw wearing lipstick that night? Yes, but she hadn't made up her face since she left work four hours earlier.

Ignorant of Procedure

What kind of an abortion was this to be, Laughlin asked. Mrs. Earnshaw did not understand. What were the mechanics to be?

"I didn't know," she said.

"Isn't it a fact something was to be injected into the female organs. Then after a period of time—hours, whatever was in the womb was to be expelled," the man who defended Axis Sally asked.

"I don't know. I never had one," replied Mrs. Earnshaw, who testified Wednesday she "hasn't given up hoping" that she will have children.

What were the last words Mrs. Earnshaw ever spoke to the deceased, Laughlin wanted to know. She couldn't "exactly remember. Maybe it was 'we'll see you a little later'."

When she returned with Miss Childs and found Mrs. Campbell, why didn't she call the police, Laughlin asked.

"I don't know. I was scared, frightened. I guess I didn't know it was so serious," she replied.

"You arranged the abortion, didn't you?"

"I only did what anyone would do for a friend or a relative."

"You knew you had violated the law, didn't you?"

Mrs. Earnshaw hesitated and said softly "Yes."

"You knew it was contrary to the law of man and the law of God, didn't you?"

Again she hesitated and then replied "Yes."

Miss Johnston, a tall statuesque blonde, testified that Myers had been drinking on the night of January 4, "but wasn't drunk—just gay and all."

Visit Not "Professional"

She said she and her fiance, Warren Waldron, were in the Fairmont st. apartment from 8 to 9 p. m. on January 4, to see Miss Ruth Childs, the apartment tenant, with whom she had been a nurse at Children's Hospital. Miss Childs has since been suspended.

Under cross examination, Miss Johnston denied her visit had been "professional, not social" and denied that she had with her a "valise with a syringe in it." She said she was wearing lipstick, but saw no kissing going on and "certainly" did not kiss Myers.

The case which is playing to a packed house, was adjourned at 1 p. m. and is scheduled to resume at 11 a. m. today.

Buzz Curtain Descends on Police Brass

The buzz came from an electric lock which Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, ordered installed on the door to the corridor where the department's top brass has offices.

A uniformed receptionist is now outside. Anyone, who wishes to see inspectors, or Barrett, must first ask a receptionist to telephone in.

Inspector Barrett said he had the lock installed to keep strangers out of the offices, and to prevent long waits for officials who are not in or who are busy.

Two inspectors are not behind the new "curtain." They are John Jefferies, in charge of police property, and Arthur E. Miller, in charge of traffic. They have offices in other parts of the building.

Citizens Ask ABC to Deny Liquor Permit

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement an application by Morris and Muriel Silverman for a license to operate a package liquor store at 1826 Benning rd. ne.

More than a dozen persons, many of them residents of the neighborhood, appeared to protest issuance of the license.

Their chief objection was based on the fact that the Blow School playground is located across the street at 19th st. and Benning rd. ne.

Many of the residents declared there is "an ample supply of liquor" in the neighborhood.

The hearing was a continuation of the hearing, which opened last Thursday, when representatives of the Recreation Board, the Board of Education, the Blow School PTA and the Kingman Park Civic Association entered protests.

75 Young People Convene Here to Plan For Midcentury White House Youth Parley

Seventy-five youths, ranging in age from 15 to 21 from some 20 States and the District, began a two-day conference here yesterday to make plans for the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

The coming conference, called every 10 years since 1909, will be held December 3. Purpose of the preliminary meeting is to organize an advisory council on youth participation and draft an agenda.

Nearly a dozen topics were suggested for the Midcentury conference, including how to improve American family life, how to give youth a stronger voice in shaping the Nation's destiny, and the importance of emotional and economic security to individual happiness.

The participants, meeting at the Federal Security Agency auditorium, today will elect a chairman and other officers of the advisory council, and formulate ways for promoting the conference in their own organizations.

In welcoming remarks yesterday, Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing, chairman of the National Conference Committee, told the group "this is one of the few important national conferences ever held in which young people had an active part."

Mrs. Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau and secretary of the National Conference, also spoke briefly.

Robert Lambert and Edmund W. Smallwood, Boys Clubs of America; Norman Karchem and Esther Lerner, B'nai B'rith; Charles P. Howard, jr. and Rena Ercelle Merritt, National Urban League; Johnny Myers and John Kiehbiel, Allied Youth, Inc.; Alonzo Sudler, U. S. National Student Association; Marjorie Ethel Ribble, Salvation Army; Gloria Abiousness, U. S. National Student Association; Mary Alford and Janet Coulson, Camp Fire Girls, Inc.; Michael Kritsinger, National Lutheran Council; Ellen Holway, National Grange; Amreta Scott, National Board, YWCA; Karl Edler and Ginny Lamaster, American Youth Hostels, Inc.

Annex Suit Held Bar to School Bond

The Fairfax County school board last night reported that Falls Church's annexation suit has made the sale of school bonds impossible.

The board's legal counsel has advised that while litigation exists, a referendum on the proposed $10,500,000 school bond issue is "useless." To date, a solution has not been found, the board said.

In reporting the present status of the school building project, the board found only one ray of hope: that a solution may be found through meetings between county and Falls Church officials.

If and when the building program goes into effect, the board asserted taxpayers would pay even less than now for school operation. At present, $2.65 out of the $3.19 per $100 assessed valuation is stamped on schools.

In 1951-52, the board said, the school tax rate would be an estimated $2.40, and $2.34 in 1952-53. The board's statement predicted the county's assessed valuation would be around 77 million dollars for 1951-52 and 99 million dollars for 1952-53. The county currently is assessed at about 64 million dollars.

Increased revenue from real estate and larger State grants would result in the lower school tax rate, the board said.

In other business, total value of the county's school buildings including shops and warehouses, was put at $3,920,200 by the board. The buildings' contents are valued at $308,500.

HOW MUCH IS ONE RESCUE WORTH?

A tiny hand above the water. Then slowly, slowly it sinks. But there is time—still time—if only someone is near, someone who knows what to do. A twelve-year-old boy, a woman, an old man—anyone, if only he knows.

And the wonderful thing is that there are millions who do know what to do and how to do it. Last year alone, you—through your Red Cross—made it possible to train more than a half-million people in water safety. Another 56,600 were authorized as instructors in water safety and first aid. It is estimated that 18,000,000 have had training in first aid and water safety through your Red Cross.

Many of these people are able to save human life—priceless human life. How much is this ability worth? It's hard to say—unless it is someone you love who has been rescued.

Your contributions to your Red Cross can help carry on this training program, help take it to new areas that need it. Give now—it may save a life sooner than you think.

You, too, can help through Your RED CROSS

Coan Homers Twice, Nats Clip Chattanooga, 9-2

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

WINTER GARDEN, FLA., March 23.—Two hundred fruit-bearing orange trees were being knocked over by bulldozers in the grove adjoining the ball park here. They were standing in the way of progress and development—of the Nats' farm system, that is. Joe Engel is putting in another baseball diamond to improve the breed of rookies he hopes to deliver to Clark Griffith.

Griff is looking to Winter Garden as the fountainhead of the talent that ultimately will lift his Nats into a higher social rating in the American League. More than 400 kids under contract to his ten minor league clubs or sifted out of his two Florida baseball schools are being processed here.

POVICH

There's a daily sideshow going on, too. The salary negotiations of Engel and Bobo Newsom, his reluctant pitcher, begin in Engel's office in the morning, are broken off and resumed on the settee by the third baseline, and begin anew by night in downtown Winter Garden.

Newsom doesn't want to pitch for Engel's Chattanooga club if he can catch on with Washington. Bucky Harris thus far refuses to swap what may be some of his pitching troubles for the Newsom headache. Bobo wants a lot of Engel's money before he signs.

BOBO SAYS he doesn't have to pitch for Engel—"I've got a clause in my contract that gives me my free agency any time I want it," he says. "Do I have to prove I can win in Chattanooga. I did that last year."

His claim that his 1949 contract contained a clause entitling Newsom to his release, didn't register with Engel. "There was no such clause," he says, "but maybe Bobo is talking about our Gentlemen's Agreement. I did say I'd release him if he could catch on with a big league club."

However, Engel speculated whether their verbal Gentelmen's Agreement was binding. "You'd have to prove first that there were gentlemen involved." He grinned, "and that could be tough to do. I don't claim to be a gentleman and I can't speak for Newsom."

FROM WHAT Griffith and his farm system operatives have seen at Winter Garden, they think they can draw up a Washington lineup for five years hence. It would read, they think, something like this:

Don Stafford, first base.
Mel Korestes, second base.
Eddie Yost, third base.
Desmond Charouhas, shortstop.
Roberto Orlando, catcher.
Pitchers—Jim Jarrett, Royce Chandler, Dick Hagen, Eric Felton, Bob McChesney.

Because there isn't a sign of a good third baseman in the entire chain, and because they vision Yost as still a useful player in 1955, they include him in their future plans. There's nothing guaranteed about the rookies they like, but they stand out as the best of the lot.

THERE IS the long-shot possibility that the Nats might come up with an all-Greek second-base-shortstop combination in the Charouhas-Korestes pair. Korestes, from Streeter, Ill., is a product of last year's Winter Garden school, starred at Orlando in the Florida State League in 1949 and is being left there for more seasoning. Right now he's rated a better fielder than any second baseman on the Washington squad. Charouhas, out of the University of Washington, is a graduate of Joe Stripp's school.

Don Stafford is the fellow Griff's scouts say "should hit a ton." He fell somewhat short last year, batting .290 at Charlotte, but he had hit .400 in the Western Carolina league. He is somewhat higher-regarded than Marv Cohen, a rugged first baseman from the New York sandlots.

The power hitter of the rookie lot is the Cuban outfielder, Fernandez, who actually hit .408 in the West Texas league last season, and is being moved up to Charlotte. The best outfielder, though, is Glenn Varner, a ball-hawk with Orlando in 1949, who also is being moved up to Charlotte. The young pitchers are so far away that none of 'em has won in better than B ball. But all of 'em can throw hard.

Rocky Marciano Fights La Starza in Garden Tonight

New York, March 23 (AP).—Two young, undefeated heavyweights—cautious Roland La Starza and brash Rocky Marciano—clash tomorrow night in a Madison Square Garden 10-rounder that may earn the victor a title shot this summer.

But win or lose, the two former GI's will cut into a hefty purse. A crowd of around 14,000 is expected to pay close to $70,000 for the International Boxing Club headliner which rates as an even money affair in the betting marts.

Rollie has been fighting for cash since July of 1947 and has hung up 37 consecutive victories in less than three years of battling. Seventeen of his triumphs were knockouts.

Fight on Radio, TV

Locally, tonight's fight will be broadcast over WMAL, 630 on your dial, and televised over WNBW, channel four, beginning at 10 o'clock.

Rocky hit the pro circuit in '48. He fought 11 times and scored as many kayos. Only one scrap went as long as three rounds. All told he's had 26 bouts, won 24 by knockouts and two by decision.

In his two Garden appearances, Rocky belted out Pat Richards in two and Carmine Vingo in six. Vingo was critically injured in their December 30 bout. But he's recovered and got married a week ago.

Georgetown, GW Shift Basketball To Uline Arena

George Washington and Georgetown Universities are moving their basketball doubleheaders from the National Guard Armory to Uline Arena next year. Both schools will play all their home games at the northeast ice plant.

Negotiations have been underway for about six months and the move will be announced officially at a press conference at Uline 11 o'clock this morning. However, the news leaked out prematurely last night.

The college doubleheaders will be played Tuesday and Friday nights, with the Caps in action Wednesday and Saturday nights. The high schools are expected to play there on the other open dates, giving the arena almost a solid week of basketball next season.

Boys Y Swimmers Win

Trautman O. K.'s Griff as Owner Of Havana Team

Clark Griffith, under the impression all along that he was chief owner of the Class B Havana team, had it confirmed yesterday.

George Trautman, head of the minor leagues, wired the Nats boss that he recognized the Nats' president as chief owner of the Florida International League club.

Griff recently dispatched Ossie Bluege, head of the Nats farm system, and Joe Cambria, his chief scout, to Havana to investigate a claim by a group of minority stockholders challenging Griffith's claim to chief ownership.

Bobby Locke Reinstated By P. G. A.

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—The Professional Golfers Association of America today reinstated British Open Champion Bobby Locke, banned by the PGA since dodging several American tourneys last July.

Locke may now compete in PGA-sponsored tournaments effective April 15.

The return of the knicker-wearing sharp-shooter from South Africa to U. S. competition was approved by a vote of the PGA's 12-man executive committee.

The reinstatement was announced by PGA President Joe Novak. He said the action followed receipt of a letter from Locke in which he applied for reinstatement and apologized for the tourney dodging.

Locke was banned by the PGA shortly after his belated withdrawal from the Inverness tourney at Toledo, Ohio, just after winning the British Open.

His decision to remain abroad also meant spurning the Western Open at St. Paul

Novak denied that Locke's healthy earnings of $24,327 in 1947 and $23,468 in 1948 in this country had anything to do with his suspension last July. Novak said the fact that Locke had earned only $4100 in 1949 before quitting this country refuted that contention.

Button Hops Off Train and Into Big Lead

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Twenty-four certified public accountants and a chief auditor yesterday told several thousand Arena patrons what they could see for themselves—that Dick Button has the heart of a great competitor.

Only 30 minutes off an overnight train from Cambridge, Mass., and without a warmup, the weary Button yesterday morning piled up a substantial 60.4-point lead in the national men's figure skating championships at the halfway mark.

Manager Onslow of White Sox Has Figured Way to Halt DiMag: Pitch in Back of Him

By Hal Wood

SAN FRANCISCO, March 23 (U.P.).—As quick with a quip as he is with his temper, Jack Onslow, verbose manager of the Chicago White Sox, covered a maximum of verbal territory today as he predicted the outcome of the American League race, told how to pitch to Joe DiMaggio, revealed his "love for umpires," etc.

After he opined that the Boston Red Sox, with a powerful first-string lineup and the New York Yankees, with great reserves, would be the teams to beat for the pennant, Onslow got around to his other troubles.

"DiMaggio, of course, is one of them," he said. "We've figured it out this season that he has one weakness, however. That's when you pitch the ball in back of him."

As for his feuding with Frank Lane, general manager of the White Sox:

"I'm wearing glasses this year and you know it's against the law for a man to strike another man wearing glasses, so I'm protected there."

He said that his feuds with Lane, which have made good copy in national magazines and the newspapers, probably would continue. Lane, sitting nearby, offered the information that this year he, Lane, "would wear 8-ounce gloves, against 6-ouncers for Onslow," in concession to age.

Asked what he thought of umpires, Onslow offered this wry comment:

Maybe They'll Catch Some Spurious Fish

Bridgeport, N. Y., March 23 (AP).—Oneida Lake fishermen are trying "counterfeit" goldfish as bait.

State law prohibits use of real goldfish.

Victor Dean developed a pickling and color mixture that makes buckeye minnows look like goldfish. He's giving samples to other anglers—but not the formula.

Animal Hasn't Chance With Him on Prowl

Dar es Salaam, Tanganyika, March 23 (AP).—Manuel Hernandez Cabrera, 63-year-old Mexico City engineer, shot and killed a buffalo with a horn spread of 64½ inches while hunting in Masailand recently; it became known today.

The spread is believed to be a record. The previous record was 56 inches. The Mexican engineer also bagged several lions and a leopard on his hunt.

Gil Drives In 5 Runs; McChesney Impressive

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Winter Garden, Fla., March 23. Gil Coan, who used to hit Southern Association pitching with gusto, had some more of the type to his liking today. It was served up by the Nats' Chattanooga farmhands and Coan recognized it quickly.

He knocked a home run out of the lot, first time up, and then a bit later he belted another with two on, into the trees bordering deep right field, and the Nats wound up in front, 9-2. All told, Chattanooga Graduate Coan fetched five runs across the plate.

Coan's demonstration was highly satisfactory to Manager Bucky Harris but even more gratifying was the exhibition of three of his rookie pitchers who held the Noogans to seven hits.

McChesney Shows Poise

Bob McChesney, the smooth-working lad from Texas who never spent a minute in organized ball previously, was bumped for both of Chattanooga's runs in the four innings he worked. He gave up five hits, but walked only one batter, showed poise and was charged with only one earned run.

Righthander Buzz Dozier and Southpaw Earl Davis were more impressive, however. That pair, from Charlotte, shut out the Lookouts in the last five innings with three hits and won themselves a longer look in the Washington camp.

Trade talk was buzzing as the Nats moved here for a one-day stand against their farm hands. The newest report is that Bucky Harris is talking seriously with the Yankees in an effort to wangle Second Baseman George Stirnweiss, who is Yankee surplus.

Yank Staff Overloaded

It is an indication that Harris is not satisfied with going into the season with his present second base set-up of Al Kozar and Sherry Robertson. Neither of that pair is the double-play man he wants in the middle of the diamond, and Stirnweiss would fit that bill.

Any deal for Steirnweiss would involve no important Washington players, with cash the chief consideration. The Yankees have a squad-cutting problem which could be erased by lopping off the veteran infielder, who is now rated third behind rookies Jerry Coleman and Bill Martin.

The Nats are threatening to claim two pitchers the Yankees must get waived out of the league and their agreement to post no claim could be a factor in the Yanks' willingness to let Washington have Stirnweiss. The Yanks, overloaded, seek to send the pitchers to their farm clubs.

IN SHORT . . . The Nats returned to Orlando tonight for the game with the Phillies tomorrow . . . Bucky Harris and Clark Griffith saw little on the Chatanooga club that might be of service to the Nats in the near future . . . But they tabbed the curve-balling pitcher, Al Sima, who was with Minneapolis last year and may be called to Washington as a relief man . . . The Nats got a soft-touch run in the fifth inning on five straight walks issued by Eric Felton . . . The Chattanooga first baseman is the veteran Al Flair, once of the Red Sox . . . Noren, as usual, was at first for the Nats late in the game, leading to the suspicion they are grooming him for that job if they are entertaining any notions they may trade Eddie Robinson for pitching help.

N. Y. Passes Bill To Outlaw Split Doubleheaders

Albany, March 22 (U.P.).—A bill aimed against major league baseball clubs which play two games in one day and charged double admissions was passed by the Senate tonight and sent to Governor Dewey.

Sponsors said the measure would tend to eliminate the practice of the Brooklyn Dodgers of splitting "normal doubleheaders and charging separate admissions for each game.

Zarilla Hits 2 Homers In 9th, Bosox Win, 12-7

Clearwater, Fla., March 23 (AP).—Al Zarilla clouted two ninth-inning home runs today, one with the bases loaded, to engineer Boston's Red Sox to a 12-7 verdict over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Sox trailed 7-4 entering the ninth when Zarilla as leadoff batter slammed a Jacko Thompson pitch over the short right field wall. His second, with three mates aboard, was off Curt Simmons.

Dom DiMaggio had homered with two on in the second to give the Sox a short-lived 4-3 edge. Del Ennis homered for two runs in the seventh to give the Phils what appeared to be a safe 7-4 lead only to have Zarilla unload in the ninth.

Yanks Win On Reynolds' 3-Run Homer

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 23 (AP).—A three-run homer by Pitcher Allie Reynolds and triples by Billy Johnson and Joe Collins enabled the New York Yankees to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals today, 8-3, for the Bombers' third straight triumph over the Redbirds this spring.

George Munger was the victim of the Reynold's clout after two had walked in the second. It was the only hit off the St. Louis righthander in his four innings on the mound.

Joe DiMaggio, though he again did not play today, denied he was suffering from a serious shoulder injury. He said the injury was an old one in the left shoulder and did not interfere in any way with his hitting or throwing. He said he would play against the Tigers tomorrow.

Vero Beach, Fla., March 23 (AP).—Brooklyn followed last night's whitewashing of the Philadelphia Athletics at Miami by beating Connie Mack's men again today, 8-4.

Pee Wee Reese played shortstop for the Brooks for the first time and had no fielding chances. However, he hit a triple, batted in one run and scored two.

Jackie Robinson and Carl Furillo each had three straight hits, Robinson driving in three runs and the outfielder two. Don Newcombe was taken out in the Athletics' four-run third and Dan Bankhead, with three hitless innings, was the winner.

In NCAA

N. C. State, CCNY Win, Gain Finals

New York, March 23 (AP).—North Carolina State's speedy, hard-driving Wolf Pack upset favored Holy Cross, 87-74, tonight to join City College of New York in the finals of the Eastern NCAA basketball playoffs. CCNY won a thriller from Ohio State, 56-55.

The Southern Conference champions and City's spectacular national invitation titlists will clash Saturday at Madison Square Garden for Eastern honors. The winners will shoot for the NCAA crown March 28 against the survivor of the Western playoffs, opening at Kansas City tomorrow night.

Scores of N. C. State fans, wearing red hats and waving Confederate flags, dotted the jam packed Garden and made more noise than the rest of the 18,000 as Sam Ranzino, the Wolf Pack forward, flipped in 32 points to set a new tournament record.

The Wolfpack, No. 5 in the national rankings, simply had too much scrap for the New Englanders in one of the roughest games of the season. Thirty-one personals were called on Holy Cross and 17 on State.

State's Vic Bubas, regular guard, went out with a seriously sprained ankle after a collision with an opponent in the first half. The Wolfpack's Dick Dickey was sent sprawling in the second half but continued after gaining lost wind.

Holy Cross' fabled Bob Cousy couldn't find his eye in the game's early stages, accounting for only five points in the first half, but he bounced back strong to lead a Crusader rally that failed through lack of staying power. Cousy wound up with 24 points.

Layne pitched in 17 points and Mager 15, both of them hitting with uncanny accuracy from beyond the side and foul line area.

Schnittker piled up 26 points

Tagel, 9-Year-Old, Captures Sager Purse at Charles Town

Miss Prime Triumphs in 2d Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., March 23. Making his 1950 debut, the 9-year-old Tagel, owned by A. W. Messersmith of Baltimore and trained by C. A. Cranford of Washington, won the James Sager Purse, named for the D. C. sportsman.

The son of Tintagel ran over a muddy racing strip, the result of heavy snowfall last night, and got home a length in front of the closest opposition in the field of seven.

W. Smith's Let Me Thru, with Jockey Freddie Kratz trying for his third winner of the day, was second and two lengths in front of William Hoyler's More Flame.

Tagel, a picture of consistency last year when he won five races and was in the money 19 times in 26 tries, was no stranger to the customers and was backed into favoritism, paying $3.80 after running the 6½ furlongs in 1:24 2-5 while under the handling of Jockey R. D. Scott of Baltimore.

Two More for McDermott

Jimmy McDermott, leading apprentice at the meting, added two winners today. He took the third with Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Boston Hero, a $10 shot and the fourth with E. Channey's Skip Bid, paying $6.60. The youngster displayed saddle skill in both events.

J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime, one-time queen of the minor tracks, resumed her winning ways in the fifth race, the day's secondary feature. Freddie Kratz rode the daughter of Swashbuckler and sent her into the finish line a length and a half in advance of P. A. Rothfuss' Dandy Foot. Third money went to W. E. Bridgeforth's Bachelor Belle in the field of seven going about 4½ furlongs.

The winner was always the favorite in the betting and returned a $3.60 mutuel, being clocked in 9:50 4/5.

Freddie Kratz, Baltimore boy who switched from steeplechase to flat riding, was aboard J. N. Barnes' Fetch It and brought the 3-year-old along the rail to get to the front and win by seven lengths at a $6.80 mutuel. S. H. Rogers' Iffie was second with Ardham Farms' Bridho third in the field of eight. The winner was clocked in :52 2/5 for the about four and a half furlongs.

Lou Pikor, furthering his comeback of the last year, rode Mrs. G. C. Everhart's Admiral's Call and saved much ground to take the decision by a length and a half from T. Bagnato's Green Isle, the pacemaker most of the way. Mrs. A. J. Fitchett's River Light was third. The winner paid $16.40 and was clocked in 1:26 2/5 for the six and one-half furlongs.

At Charles Town

DEAR FOLKS:

Get-away coming up here. Charles Town steps aside after the Friday program in favor of Laurel's meeting opening Saturday, but will resume action on April 8, running against Havre de Grace for three weeks. Jockey Pat O'Brien was called to Cumberland due to the death of his mother. Trainer C. H. Fitzgerald suffered a broken leg fighting a field fire near his Hagerstown home. I'm not sure there's a bit of truth in it, but somebody reports that a drunk walked up to the mutuel window and said, "Gimme a ticket on No. 3." Just then the off bell rang and he was shut out. So the drunk walked out to the rail, saw No. 3 finish far back in the pack and tore up the $2 bill, muttering "Some day I'm going to give up on horses." See you on the rail for the Charles Town finale and the Laurel inaugural.—BILL.

Kentucky Tavern taste

Many, many people tell us that Kentucky Tavern is the "tastingest" bond of them all. It has been a tradition with us to make and keep it uniformly so for three generations, and we feel that the experience gained in making more Kentucky bourbon than any other distillery gives us a little edge—a little finer touch. Try Kentucky Tavern next time. It's the finest of the premium bonds.

Blackwell in Form as Tigers Bow

Ewell Tames Detroit for Five Innings

Tampa, Fla., March 23 (AP).—Ewell Blackwell, who the Cincinnati Reds hope will be their "come-back kid" of 1950, pitched five scoreless innings today as the Rhinelanders licked the Detroit Tigers, 4 to 1.

Blackwell looked like money in the bank today. He had the Tigers hitting into the dirt and allowed only three balls to be hit out of the infield. The Bengals got only four hits off Blackwell and all of them were singles.

Art Houtteman and Rookie Ray Herbert did the Detroit pitching and allowed 11 hits, one of them a wind-blown homer by Jimmy Bloodworth. The two runs the Reds scored in the first inning were the first given up by Houtteman this spring.

Button Shows His Mettle

at Harvard Wednesday night. He's a sophomore there.

He came in on the 8:30 a. m. train, and barely had time to ride to the arena and put on his skates. He was on the ice at 9 o'clock.

After exhibiting the skate control which have won him two national and three world senior championships, Dick took the kinks out of his bones with a two-hour workout at Chevy Chase Ice Palace.

Then he caught a couple of quick winks and took off for Uline where last night he treated the audience and five judges to a preview of the free skating routine with which he hopes to complete his championship victory there tonight.

Through all of yesterday's scurrying, the 20-year-old with closed-cropped hair kept an even temper. Quite in contrast to other contestants who were tense and curt at having to concentrate on their intricate tracings in the face of photographers' flashbulbs.

The junior pairs, senior pairs and fours staged a spectacular preview of their routines at last night's performance before a very appreciative audience. The senior men and ladies also exhibited their free skating, but none of it counted in the scoring. Later, the five classes will repeat their routines for points.

In addition to Button, among those who performed were: Defending Senior Ladies Champion Yvonne Sherman and her leading challenger, Sonya Klopfer, both of New York; World Senior Pairs Champions Karol and Peter Kennedy of Seattle and Janet Gerhauser, John Nightingale, Marilyn Thomas and Marlyn Thomas, fours champions since 1947.

Golfers May Lie About Scores But Clubs Are Sacred

If you were to look at some scorecards, you'd swear golfers have no conscience—but here's proof that isn't necessarily so.

Yesterday, a set of clubs turned up at Georgetown Prep, which has a suitable nine-hole course. The Rev. Thomas Dugan, S. J., assistant headmaster, took the clubs from a breathless eighth-grader who received them from a man in Chevy Chase.

Attached was this note:

"Several years ago, when I was younger and even more foolish than I am now, I stole these clubs from your locker room. I wish to return them and ask that you dispose of them as you see fit."

Bradley Faces UCLA Tonight In NCAA Play

Kansas City, March 23 (AP).—Steam and stamina probably will prove the deciding factor in the Western NCAA basketball play-offs here tomorrow and Saturday nights.

All four entries—Bradley, UCLA, Brigham Young and Baylor—featured rapid-fire attacks. Dropping behind the pace only for a few moments could be disastrous.

Bradley (30-4) backers are giving five and one-half points in the Braves' game with UCLA, Pacific Coast champion, at 10:45 (PES) tomorrow.

Brigham Young University, Skyline Six titlist, is favored by six points over Baylor of the Southwest in the first game at 9 o'clock (PES).

MEN READ CAREFULLY
Saturday afternoon 1:30 p. m. sharp, I want to talk to 20 men who are really ambitious in securing a position that will give them steady employment the year 'round. In other words, there are no laying-off periods, and consistent income is the income that really counts. It doesn't matter what your past employment has been, all we ask is that you be willing to study and learn as we teach you our work. It will also be necessary that you be willing to get along on $75 to $85 per week for the first 4 or 6 weeks while learning our work. A car is essential. You must also be able to give the names of 3 people who will vouch for your honesty and integrity. We prefer men who are married or men who have some measure of responsibility. I would also like to talk to a few men who are mechanically inclined and who know a good thing when they see it. Therefore if you are honest and of good character, willing worker, neat in appearance, come and talk with me.

I am a clergyman recently transferred to New York State and since I do not expect to return to Washington, I'm obliged to offer my home here for sale so that I may buy another one where I now live. It is an attractive and substantial semidetached tapestry brick residence of 4 bedrooms, 2 baths; there are 2 screened sleeping porches, and a splendid side porch off the living room; the 1st floor arrangement is particularly pleasant and spacious, with a very large center reception room that especially appealed to me when I first saw it. I purchased this home a few years ago at $22,500 and spent about $1500 more in improvements. Now I am offering it at a substantial loss to me in order to effect a quick sale. Please contact my agent, Mr. Scanland, with WAGGAMAN-BRAWNER, 1700 Eye St. N.W. ME. 3860.

MARYLAND

500 ACRES, located in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge. This bridge is now operated with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles. Also proposed to build a new bridge from Alexandria over to this neighborhood. Baltimore Blvd. is coming down in this section. The East Capitol St. Bridge is going to be built over here soon. This will make the greatest gateway to Washington of all times. If you want to see this property you don't need a salesman. Just ride to S. Capitol St. and Maryland line and look ahead 4 squares, and that's our 500 acres. Now for comparison of other gateways to Washington just follow me up the line on the Virginia end of these bridges—the S. 14th St. Bridge where the Hot Shoppe is located in the Virginia end is worth a million dollars an acre. Come up to Key Bridge, and the Virginia end there property is worth a million dollars an acre. Come to the gateway to the Memorial Bridge—a farmer bought a farm there for $3000 and gave it to his son. He sold it for $50,000. Now it's worth $2,000,000. Mr. Nevius, one of the vice presidents of the Riggs National Bank bought 30 acres over there for $30,000 and sold it to the government by condemnation jury for $1,600,000. These illustrations will give you an idea what this 500 acres will be worth per acre. I bought this ground 20 years ago for $500 an acre expecting the bridge to be built sooner, but the Congress didn't come through with the appropriations. There is no guesswork now. It's cheaper at $3000 than when I bought it at $500 an acre. If you are sub-dividing you can make millions. I'm in my 83d year and I'm settling my own estate, and that's the only reason I am selling.

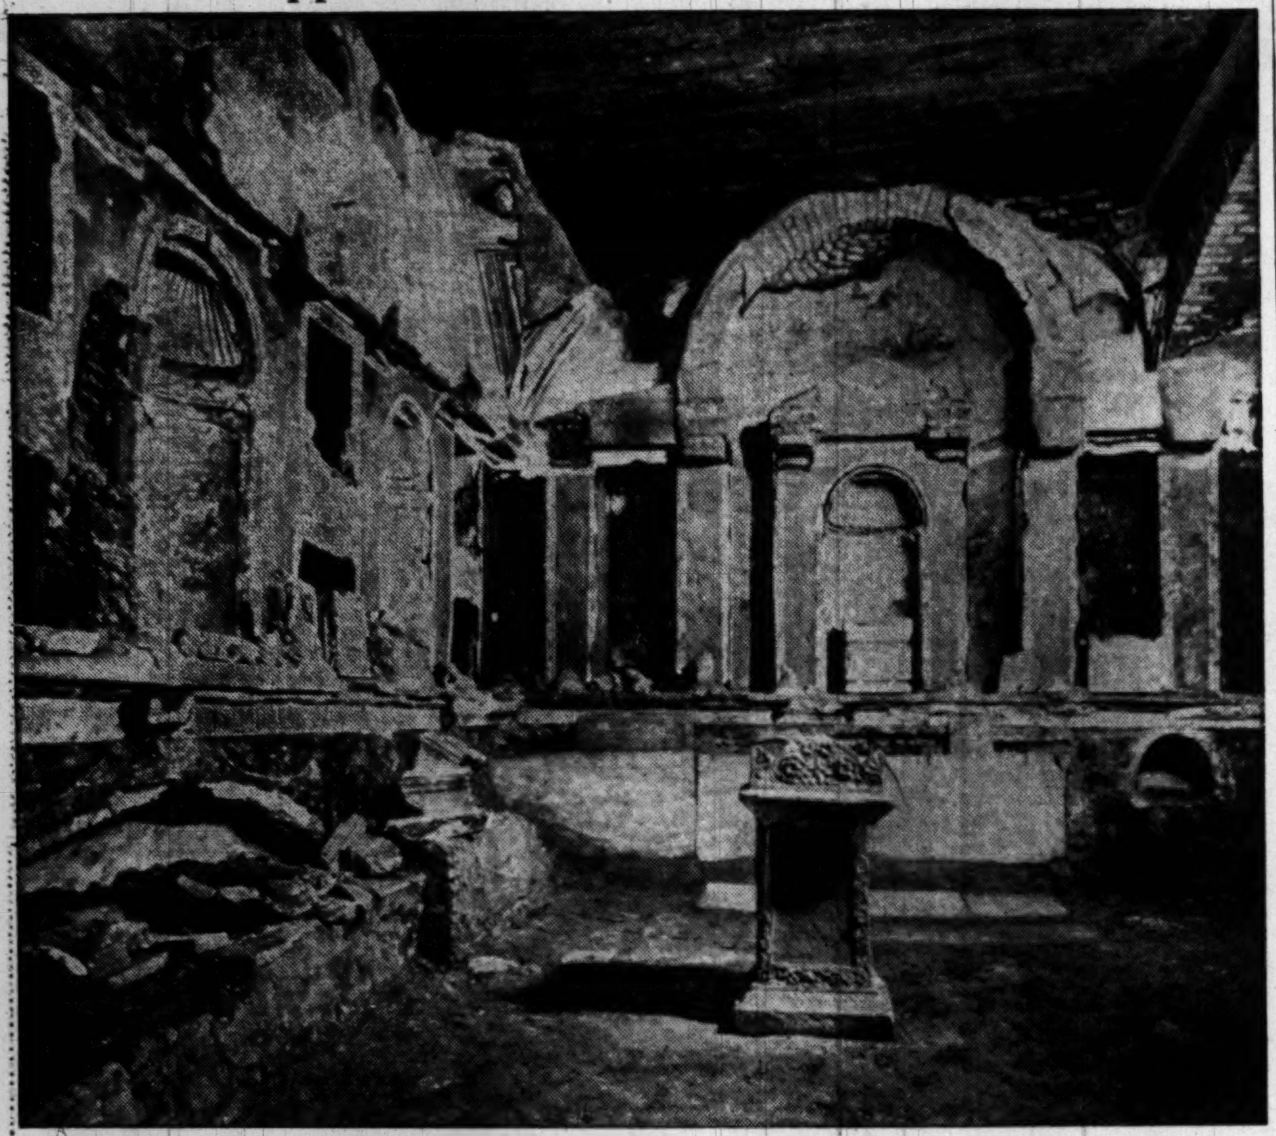
Discoveries Support Belief St. Peter Is Buried in Church



TOMB FOUND — Caetennii tomb, discovered by archeologists beneath St. Peter's Church in Rome, is one of the finds made in 10 years of digging which support the Roman Catholic belief that St. Peter was buried about 66 A.D. in a pagan cemetery at that site on Vatican Hill. This picture and others of the excavation were published by Life Magazine along with an article by Msgr. Ludwig Kaas, administrator of St. Peter's, telling how Vatican workmen explored the grottoes beneath the world's largest church

POPE'S SARCOPHAGUS—The stone sarcophagus of Pope Pius XI, who died in 1939, is in the renovated upper grottoes under the basilica of St. Peter's. The desire of Pius to be buried below St. Peter's have led to excavations in that area, Life reported

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

ANCIENT MOSAIC—Also found under St. Peter's was this mosaic of Pope John VII, who died in 707 A.D. Square halo signifies he was alive when the portrait was made. He is pictured holding a model of a small chapel he built in the Constantine basilica in honor of the Virgin Mary

New Evidence On St. Peter's Burial Found

New York, March 23 (AP).—Workmen digging beneath St. Peter's Basilica have discovered tombs supporting a basic Roman Catholic belief that St. Peter was buried about 66 A. D. in a pagan cemetery at that site on Vatican Hill, Life Magazine said today.

"The greatest secret of all—whether the relics of the Chief Apostle himself was actually found—is one which the Vatican still reserves for itself, though there have been rumors that the discovery of the relics will be announced at an appropriate time during the Holy Year," the magazine said.

Pope Pius XII, who has sponsored the investigation, declared more than a year ago that the archaeological discoveries demonstrated the Apostle's burial place "is and was under the cupola of St. Peter's Church."

With pictures of the excavations, Life prints an article on the work by Msgr. Ludwig Kaas, administrator of St. Peter's.

He explained that the exploration was started more by accident than design when Vatican workmen, clearing a site for the burial of Pope Pius XI in 1939 in the grottoes immediately below the basilica, came upon a small vaulted chamber not marked in foundation plans left by Renaissance craftsmen. This persuaded the Vatican to make a further search.

Workmen cut deeper in soil laden with pagan and Christian antiquities. Mechanical equipment was barred. The men worked with their hands, picks and shovels. Tombs and crypts decorated with beautiful mosaics and frescoes and carved Sarcophagi and Urns were uncovered.

A Second Century funeral monument found in 1940 offered the first undeniable proof of the "pagan burial ground on Vatican Hill," Monsignor Kass wrote. A pagan tomb of the same period was unearthed later, along with an inscription referring to "The Circus."

This was interpreted to mean Nero's's Circus, where tradition has it that St. Peter was executed. The workmen then cut their way carefully to the area directly below the Basilica's 452-foot-high cupola.

"For the time being the discoveries which were made in the central area below the main altar of St. Peter's must remain undisclosed," Monsignor Kass said. ". . . At the present time a commission of reputable archaeologists is preparing the publication of its scientific conclusions."

Pacelli Braved Post-War Perils of Munich

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

VI—SUBDUES COMMUNIST BAND

PEACE, which had been honorably possible in 1917 through the papal intermediary, came to Germany 15 months later, under utter surrender. A starved and completely misguided people, seeing its greatest virtue, that of faithful discipline, grossly betrayed by its leaders, fell into convulsions of revolution. Nowhere in Germany did revolution rear its head in more ugly guise than in the Bavarian capital. The Red Flag of the Spartakus movement flew from the royal residence. The government, the diplomatic corps, the Inter-Allied Relief Commission, all had fled to Bamberg in northern Bavaria. For the Russians of the neighboring prison camps who had been hailed as Bolshevik brothers, armed and placed to guard the barricades in the streets of the capital, recognized no authority whatsoever.

Monsignor Pacelli was the only diplomat to stay in Munich. From the meagre provisions of the Nunciature he brought food to the children in the poorest quarters. When later Munich was relieved, all that was left in the Papal Embassy was some stale bread and cocoa. So undaunted was the Nuncio that he went out on these errands of mercy every day in his black limousine until the Reds commandeered it.

A band of seven armed brigands one day actually invaded his home. Calmly the tall, 43-year-old dignitary met them and inquired their business. Whether it was the cool contempt of the piercing dark eyes and of the thin lips in his earnest white face—whether it was the high dignity which he represented with such unflinching courage, or the total lack of any physical fear—the Reds, having demanded "money and treasures" and been met with a curt refusal, contented themselves with taking his car away.

Day after day the Nuncio telephoned to the Town Hall to whatever chieftain was in power, pointing out that as representative of a foreign sovereign his possessions were inviolable by international law. The officials became so annoyed that one of them threatened "to come and shoot the whele nest." "Bitte schon"—you are welcome—said the Nuncio coolly, putting down the receiver.

Got His Car Back

THAT DAY 13 aristocrats had been shot in cold blood. The Italian Military Attache, who had stayed in Munich to guard the Italian Legation building, had warned Pacelli that there was a plan afoot to take the Nunciature with machine guns. But all that happened was that Pacelli got his car back in the end. Many years before, the young altar boy had confided to his mother that he would like to become a missionary. Now a Nuncio with the titular rank of archibishop, there was no flinching from his duty to stay at his post and thus impart confidence to the stricken population. These were his missionary days.

After General von Epp had delivered the caiptal, Pacelli was its most popular diplomat. The only time he left Munich in the ensuing year, apart from his annual holiday, was when he went on his special mission to report on the situation in the Ruhr district. The French had occupied this industrial nerve center of Germany—and that with black troops—to "punish" the default on the reparation payments.

Pacelli flew to the danger zone, and after a personal survey sent an exhaustive report to the Vatican. This formed the basis for the Pope's letter to his Secretary of State, in which His Holiness massed the moral force of the church against this Ruhr adventure.

The Papal Letter meant to be, at the same time, an approval of the plan of Mr. Charles Evans Hughes, then Secretary of State in President Coolidge's Cabinet, to have a tribunal of impartial experts decide upon the capacity of Germany to pay reparations.

Promoted to Berlin

IN 1925, his work in Munich crowned with a Concordat between the Holy See and Bavaria, Eugenio Pacelli was promoted as Nuncio to Berlin, accredited to the Reich government. By unwritten usage—a right acknowledged in every capital of the world with the exception of London and Washington—he became, as Papal Ambassador, Dean of the Diplomatic Corps. He had presented his credentials to the stocky, former saddlemaker, socialist President Fritz Ebert, and so firm were their personal bonds—though Ebert was a born Catholic who no longer practiced the religion of his youth—that Pacelli was often a guest at his table.

Ebert's successor as President, Field Marshal von Hindenburg, a staunch and strict Protestant, took such a firm liking to the Roman prelate that he once showed him the prayer his father had written for his confirmation. Viscount d'Abernon, the first British Ambassador in postwar Berlin, has called Pacelli in his Memoirs the best informed man in Berlin. He was to be seen in the salon of Dr. Stresemann, the dynamic Foreign Minister, and to be heard at popular meetings in the enormous Sport Palast.

Four years he worked patiently at the Concordat between Prussia and the Holy See. He won his victories by sheer patience, making use of every opportunity, never giving up, never letting himself be swayed by outside influences. He was superior to all in the subtle art of diplomacy. When the term "Concordat" caused excitement among Protestant die-hards, he named it a "solemn convention." What is in a word! The German Protestant Press Service in a tribute on his departure lauded his 10 years' work in Germany as that of "a sower amidst ruins." It sums him up admirably.

Von Hindenburg Moved

ON BEING nominated a Cardinal in December, 1929, and called to the supreme council of the Church of Rome, he had to relinquish his post in Berlin. President Von Hindenburg was deeply moved at the farewell audience. "Germany," he said, "will never forget your share in the pacification of our country." The Nuncio was driven in an open carriage to the Anhalter station, accompanied by Dr. Klausener, then the President of the Berlin Catholic Action (murdered in his ministry during the July massacre of 1934). Deputations of all organizations, from student clubs to trade unions, lined the route through Berlin's busiest streets. On the carpeted and flower-bedecked station platform the Cabinet and the Diplomatic Corps had foregathered to bid him farewell. But hardly had the express left the suburbs of Berlin behind it, when Monsignor Pacelli unlocked his portable and settled down to type his letters.

A Limit to Labor

Some people worry while they work . . . Because they have the fear . . . That life will vanish in a day . . . Or in another year . . . They want to do their utmost and . . . Acquire all they can . . . Before they meet the limit of . . . Their temporary span . . . And it is very possible . . . That in their daily grind . . . They only have the welfare of . . . Their fellowmen in mind . . . But in their eagerness to be . . . The winner in the race . . . Too often they tempted to . . . Pursue a killing pace . . . And then they lose and then too late . . . They learn the other side . . . And see the sense of resting and . . . Of taking life in stride.

When the Red-Red-Robin Comes Bob-Bob-Bobbin'

Rites of Spring Call For Bucket and Mop

By Lucia Brown

THOUGH some say "spring cleaning" went out with the hobble skirt, you'll still find a lot of people scurrying around with brooms and brushes the first warm day!

Somehow, the urge to clean is revitalized by the robin's chirp and the first magic drift of green across the trees. It's just like buying a new spring outfit. Your old winter clothes—and your old dusty house—look twice as awful in bright vernal sunshine. Time to get to work and get everything beautiful for the new, new season!

Of course, spring cleaning needn't be the chore it once was. The "clean-as-you-go" method is in fashion nowadays—and a sensible idea it is, too, never to let dirt accumulate so that you nearly kill yourself spring and fall.

Besides, all the new gadgets, detergents, pastes, powders and such have taken a lot of the elbow grease out of the job. Planning ahead can help you rout the rigors of housecleaning, too.

Household Helpers

FROM LOCAL STORES

WASHING TONGS for Venetian blinds. A flat sponge on each tip is clamped down and run along sides of slats. Cleaning solution comes with tongs.

MOP TOP of nubby cotton to slip over the mop-head when you dust woodwork and walls.

LINT-TREE UTILITY CLOTH of plasticized absorbent cotton. Comes seven to an inexpensive package. Fine for dishes, glassware, furniture.

BED SPRING BRUSH—long and narrow—to dust down inside those confusing coils.

FURNITURE TREATMENT SET, containing (1) stain remover (for spots made by hot plates, alcohol, other liquids); (2) cleaner to wipe away grime; (3) scratch-concealing polish; (4) soft polishing cloth.

DECAL REMOVER, to use in taking off old decalcomanias. Blotter that you wet and leave on decal for five hours to loosen.

SPOT-AND-STAIN REMOVER, made by well-known manufacturer of cleaning fluids, to take out lipstick, fruit stains, gravy, grease, chocolate, jelly, mustard.

First take pad and pencil and go through the house and list the chores to be done. Room by room, add the cleaning jobs, such as waxing floors, washing woodwork, polishing furniture, cleaning windows, polishing silver, cleaning rugs, washing curtains and bedspreads, spraying carpets, and so forth.

Next, make a trip to a housewares department or store and get acquainted with new—or previously overlooked—products that may help you do a better cleaning job. Carry your list of chores along so you can fit what you buy more completely to your needs.

Organize your cleaning job so that order is restored before the family comes home at night. This can be done by tackling one room at a time, or one special job at a time.

Be comfortable when you're cleaning house. Dress in slacks or shorts, turn music on the radio, take an occasional rest period, renew energy or change your pace by stopping to drink a big glass of milk, change shoes to rest your feet.

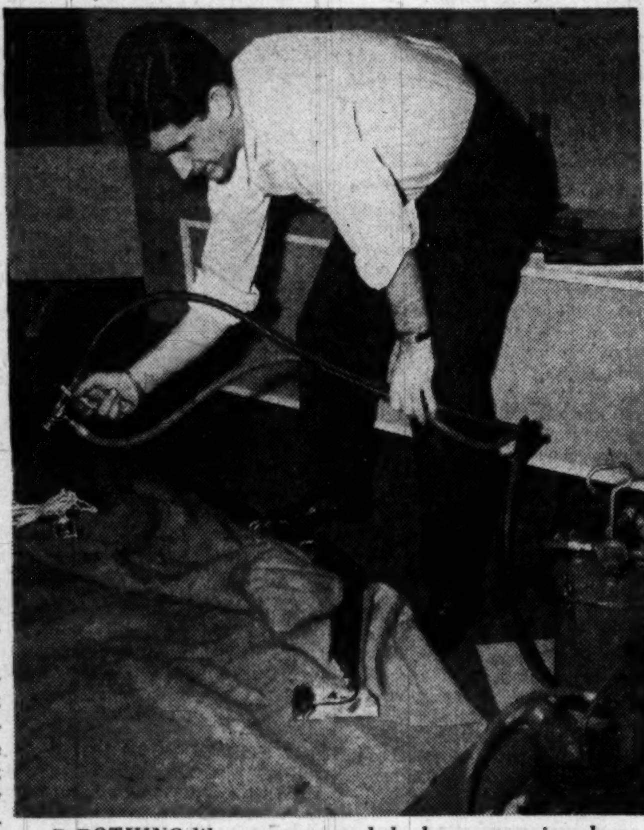
Try to reduce the number of motions you go through on each job. Avoid retracing steps as much as possible. Combine parts of a job, such as rearranging furniture and dusting it. Select and arrange your equipment with an eye to saving time and energy.

Continue one cleaning process as long as possible before changing to another, the Department of Agriculture's booklet on "House Cleaning Management and Methods" suggests. Clean all the rugs on one floor at a time, for instance, or dust all the furniture. Dropping one tool frequently to pick up another causes some nervous readjustments. Complete the job and put all the tools away before taking up another household task.

Since stooping and bending are tiring, use long-handled tools as much as possible. Work on your knees only as a last resort!

Wash walls or wood trim from the bottom up, because when water runs down a soiled wall it leaves streaks. A good cleaner for washable walls and painted woodwork is made by adding a cup of ammonia, ½ cup vinegar and ¼ cup baking soda to 1 gallon water.

Don't forget that fighting the clothes moth and other bugs is a vital part of the spring cleaning job. Be sure to spray closets, beds and the like with a 5 percent DDT oil solution or some other good residual spray after you clean them.



NOTHING like a man around the house at spring cleaning time! One job he might do for you—with vacuum cleaner or small power spray—is to mothproof blankets and rugs

CREAM wax is an excellent dirt remover, as well as a polisher, on all sorts of painted and enameled surfaces. Rub on with a soft cloth

FURNITURE surfaces should be clean before polish is applied. Here's how to whip up a furniture wash that will safely clean wood finishes: Add 3 tablespoons raw linseed oil and 1 tablespoon gum turpentine to 1 quart hot water and mix thoroughly. Wash a small area of wood at a time with a cloth wrung out of this solution. Dry immediately with a soft cloth. When entire surface is covered, polish in the usual way

Campfire Unit Guests for Tea At Embassy

Lady Franks, wife of the Ambassador from Great Britain, was hostess at a tea in the British Embassy yesterday for Campfire Girl leaders of Region II, now meeting in Washington.

A troop of Campfire Girls from Friends School, of which Miss Caroline Franks, the daughter of the Ambassador and Lady Franks, is a member, assisted at the tea in the ballroom.

This party was the highlight of the opening session of the three-day annual meeting of the leaders. Region II includes the District of Columbia, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

Theme of the conference is "Life Begins at Forty," commemorating the fortieth anniversary of Campfire Girl activities in America. Hosts for the meeting, which is being held at the Wardman Park Hotel, are leaders of the Potomac Area Council of Campfire Girls.

Mrs. William Harvey Young, chairman of Region II and a past president of the Potomac Area Council, presided at the opening session yesterday morning. Arthur Kruse, executive director, United Community Services, was guest speaker.

At luncheon in the Burgundy Room, Mrs. Charles Brannan was guest of honor. Miss Dorothea Sullivan, assistant professor of social work, National Catholic School of Social Service, Catholic University, spoke on "Groups for Growth," and Miss Helen Rowe, association national director of the Campfire Girls, New York City, discussed "The Structure of Our Family Tree."

Highlight of the conference will be a reception at Blair House on Saturday noon with Mrs. Truman hostess.

French, U. S. Fashions Will Vie at Show

French imports will vie for honors with American-made costumes at the luncheon-meeting of the Washington Fashion Group, March 30, at the Washington Hotel.

Representative of the couture groups of both Paris and New York will be the guest of honor, Pauline Trigere. Miss Trigere, winner of the 1949 American Fashion Critics' Award, came to this country in 1937 after a successful career as a designer in Paris.

Several designs from her current spring and summer collection will be shown at the luncheon, along with a group of Paris imports. The latter will be presented by Woodward & Lothrop's and Pasternak's. Paris houses represented will include Dior, Molyneux, Desses, Fath and Balenciaga.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling Mrs. Helen Blandford, Executive 4578.

Confessions of a Famous Father

Sorry, Right Number! So Pop Will Have to Wait

By John Mason Brown

(Editor's Note: Mr. Brown turns his critical eye away from the world with its woes to observe with reportorial zeal his two small sons and their playmates. This is the fifth of six chapters condensed from John Mason Brown's latest book, "Morning Faces," published by Whittlesey House.)

DISCOVERY OF THE TELEPHONE

"He is very good at the telephone," we say of a seven-year-old, meaning that he can take messages with as much accuracy as the operator of a hotel switchboard.

Although this may be true, all things considered it is the most niggardly of praise. The stubborn fact is, however, that the children soon take over.

At breakfast or after school hours and during the whole of their vacations when they are home, they cannot be pried away from the telephone.

A receiver becomes their third ear; a mouthpiece, their extra lip. Formerly they functioned as ventriloquists' dummies for our guiding whispers ("Say, 'How are you Grandpop?'"; "Say, 'Thanks for the present;'" "Say, 'Love to Granny;'" "Say, 'I had a very nice time.'") Now they blossom suddenly into filibusters.

Susanne Suda

Soon they own the controlling stock in the household's installation

Even Adults Are Outshown

THEY could not talk with more relish, at greater length, about less on the phone if they were adults. Before you can say Alexander Graham Bell, they own the controlling stock in the household's installation.

Sometimes I am even hopeful enough to imagine that other people may want to call me on business or personal matters. But I am losing the agility necessary to get there first and the strength required to tug the receiver away from hands which grow daily in power.

My younger boy, being seven, is not yet a habitual dialer. He has his serious uses for the phone—birthday parties, motion-picture dates, and occasional, very abrupt conversations with his contemporaries. These consist mainly of "Yes," "No," "Sure," and "When."

With a sinking heart, of recent weeks I have noticed that his monosyllables are giving way to sentences of Jamesian length. This is an expensive sign.

So is the rather secret official business which he has been conducting, evidently without fear of tapped wires. I have in mind the summoning of the gang he is at present organizing. I haven't meant to eavesdrop, but since the conversations have taken place in my study it has been hard for me not to do so.

I gather that a classmate named Ralph, who lives ten blocks away, is the leader of the "foe." How many followers Ralph has, I have no way of guessing. For his sake and theirs I hope they are numerous, because I do know they are being opposed by a band which consists of three spies, seven fighters, one first-aid man, seven inventors, and three generals, with my son serving as supreme commander.

Wires Kept Burning On Vital Matters

MY 11-year-old boy has, like his friends, reached years of greater communication on the telephone. They call each other incessantly at all hours on matters which, to them, are never trivial.

Subjects as imperative as tomorrow's homework; who has mumps, measles, or appendicitis; who got what prize from what cereal; who listened to which radio program; who has read what comic—all these are topics of interminable interest which keep me and the wires burning.

I surmise that, when no favorite programs are on the air, young boys deem it a point of honor not to hang up first. Manifestly, the telephone to them is just another form of the outstaring game. Even if one has weakened and said good-by, both keep the receiver up to see which surrenders first by hanging up first. This can be trying if, as an adult, you are waiting for an important long distance call.

If Mr. Bell's invention is a source of pleasure to grownups, on rainy afternoons it can, to pre-teenagers, be the most productive joke factory they know.

What delights can equal those to be had from ringing any number, made up or chosen at random, and pretending (in a treble and amidst giggles that could fool no one except yourself) to be a representative of the water company. He is calling to warn the lady of the house that an acute water shortage is expected and that she had better fill reserve buckets and put them in her bathtub.

Or bothering some unsuspecting stranger to say that the department of sanitation is looking for him. Or falling back on the old, old gag and calling some unknown man to ask him if he smokes, in order to reply, "Isn't that funny? Many men smoke but Fu Manchu." (Catch?)

Or, more delectable still, telephoning Charlie's house, pretending to be Alfred, and asking Charlie please to come up at once. Then ringing Alfred, using Charlie's name, and urging him to come right over.

To the young, apparently, such antics are among life's foremost joys. They are jokes which never exhaust themselves. They only exhaust adults.

Parents Fight A Losing Battle

MY WIFE and I already sense that, so far as our telephone is concerned, we are fighting a losing battle. What we are now surviving on are, of course, only preliminary skirmishes. Our telephone will not be entirely lost to us until, one inevitable afternoon we hear one of our boys, in an unreliable voice, whisper "dearest" or "darling" into our phone.

We may regret it when our young have sprouted to the point where our telephones become theirs. But let any of us hear their voices when, from a friend's house, they are calling us at home, or we are long-distancing from a journey, and all is forgiven.

No letters, however eloquent, can say what their young voices say merely by being heard. When they speak unprompted; when the talk is at least two-way; when the interchange of ideas and interests is genuine, then Bell becomes our hero, and all those bills sent in by his company dwindle into insignificance.

Arts and Letters Society Sponsors Story-Writing Contest

A short story contest with a first prize of $100, second prize of $50 and a third prize of $25 is being sponsored for the second year by the Washington chapter of the National Society of Arts and Letters. The contest is open to students currently in Washington, D. C., and suburban area colleges.

One of the purposes of the society is to encourage and assist young American artists. Steps will be taken by the society to obtain publication of the winning story.

As a result of the interest created last year by the contest, a group of literary-minded students at Wilson Teachers College have recently published "The Talisman," a literary review, which features in its first issue the short story "Now Is the Time." This story won first prize in the contest of 1949 and was written by a veteran, Ralph W. Walker. The magazine also contains one of the stories receiving honorable mention in the contest, "Scent of Roses" by Agnes Macek.

Judges for 1950 will be Capt. Walter Karig, author of "The Fortunate Island"; Pat McGerr, author of "Pick Your Victim" and "Save the Witness," and Lee Brady, author of "The Edge of Doom." Entries must be mailed not later than midnight May 6, 1950. The entry must be accompanied by a contest application blank which may be obtained from the English department of local colleges or from the N. S. A. L.

Presentation of the award will be made at the Arts and Letters Scholarship Benefit on June 8, at which time the society will present its annual scholarship awards in the fields of art, music and literature.

Stories should not be over 5000 words in length. Entries, along with completed application blank, should be mailed to Mrs. Frank H. Rowe, jr., 2700 Wisconsin ave. nw., Washington, 7, D. C.

High School Girl, 17, Admits Social Failure; She Is Shy and Her Parents Rule With Heavy Hand, Sending Her to School in Eccentric Garb

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Maybe my problems are just adolescent ones, but if so, they certainly last a long time and don't fade away as teen-age troubles are supposed to do.

I am a girl 17, a senior in high school, and a complete social failure due to my being an extreme introvert and also too shy. I have no close girl friend and have had only one date—and that was last year.

I haven't been able to figure out why I am an introvert, although I've given it a lot of thought and am still working on it. However, that is not my main trouble at this time,—which is how to break away from my parent-attachment as I get older. I love my parents despite the things they do, yet I want to be independent, to the extent that is suitable for my age.

My mother makes me wear ski pants—to school—yes, ski pants! I am the only girl in high school who does, and I go to a big high school. Mother also makes me ask permission to go to a movie on Saturday or Sunday afternoons, and I cannot go on school nights even if I could get home by 7 p. m.

How can I show my mother that I am capable of deciding the clothes to wear, the places to go, and the friends to go with me?

C. A.

How Introvert Gets That Way

DEAR C. A.: The glimpse you give of your wholly dominant, blindly inconsiderate mother, who sentences you to the unspeakable horror—from the adolescent viewpoint—of wearing eccentric dress to school, when nobody else is thus appareled, certainly suggests that she's responsible for your introvert traits.

An introvert isn't born "that way." He gets that way due to early conditioning, by which I mean painful or frightening experiences in human relations that scarred his sensibilities and caused him to develop a shamed, defensive concept of self. If one could turn back to the source of the trouble, one would find that harsh, overbearing or accusatory treatment dealt him by authoritative persons (young or old) in his early childhood, had made him chronically anxious in all situations involving close contact or competitive dealing with other people.

The introvert has little success in friendship or romance simply because he involuntarily freezes up or backs away when opportunities arise that might be turned to profit by moderate exercise of self confidence. And that's been your handicap to popularity with boys and girls, I daresay.

If you hadn't been manipulated into the introvert mold at an early age, if instead you'd been favored with liberal loving encouragement in formative years, that invested you with layer upon layer of happy self esteem, then I'm sure you could have taken even the ski-pants problem in stride successfully, in case you had to in adolescence. But, of course, if you'd had that more fortunate training, you'd have had different mentors at home—parents more sensitive to the inmost feelings and imperative psychological needs of growing children.

Parents Selfish and Lazy

IT APPEARS that your parents have lost track of time in rearing you—sending you to school in ski pants as if you were still in rompers, and supervising your recreation as if you hadn't yet reached the age of reason. Also it seems that their policy is to take the path of least resistance—the course that doesn't require positive active accommodation from them. In keeping you on a short rein, and having you do exactly as they say—and never mind your own suggestions—they are being terrifically selfish and lazy, I must say.

It is strenuous business, uphill going all the way, to foster healthy growth of personality in a child, and a parent has to be alert, resilient and openminded throughout the assignment. In these remarks, I hope to waken your parents to the serious damage being done you by their noncooperative rule. Perhaps if they realize their mistake, they will give you a better break. But if they don't of their own accord, then I advise you to get firsthand help in your own locality, from a clergyman or educator trained in skillful handling of family relations.

Child Expert Practices What She Preaches

By Norma Lanum

IF YOU happen to see Mrs. Dorothy D. Lee walk into her office wearing a rather shaggy crepe paper posy on her pretty tweed suit or a homemade shell necklace over her lace blouse, don't give it a second thought.

MRS. LEE

It's just a case of a child guidance authority practicing what she preaches.

One of the most vital functions of a mother, according to Mrs. Lee, is to make her small children feel important. So when her five-year-old Sabra, youngest of the four Lee children, makes a posy or a necklace for Mommy to wear to work, Mommy wears it.

"It's such a thrill to see the expression on her face when I leave home with her flower pinned to my suit," says Mrs. Lee.

Mrs. Lee's office for the next seven months is on the fifth floor of the Social Security Building where she is a consultant on anthropology for the fact-finding board of the Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth which opens next December. Mrs. Lee was guest speaker at the Washington Vassar Club's luncheon meeting yesterday.

How She Did It

HOW DOES an anthropologist become a child guidance expert? Here's how petite, Grecian-born Mrs. Lee explains it:

At several points during her extensive research in anthropology she detected signs of what she thought was child neglect among families in the primitive cultures she studied. This was before she became a mother herself.

By the time her first child, Anna, was two years old Mrs. Lee had retraced her previous studies through the eyes of a mother.

And then she discovered that many of the practices of primitive cultures, such as the Kwoma culture in New Guinea, were better for their young.

For instance, the Kwoma parents took their babies into the fields in planting time. Children as young as four and five were expected to dig holes for the yams.

Revalued the Evidence

MOST anthropologists, says Mrs. Lee, considered this too great a burden to be placed on the shoulders of a young child. They reasoned that the child should be playing with others his own age and taking part in more creative activities.

But most anthropologists are men or single women, says Mrs. Lee pointedly. A mother understands that it is most essential for the young ones to have an important role in the family and share in family responsibilities.

That's how Mrs. Lee began her studies in child guidance. And now, 11 years and three children later, the anthropologist has some set, and practical, views on the subject.

First, mothers should learn faith and love from their children. "When I get up in the morning with my hair all mussed, looking like a hag, one of the children will throw his arms around me and say 'Oh, mother, how beautiful you are!' "

Could Copy the Example

WE SHOULD have that same unrestrained affection for our children, she says. We should have the same faith in them and the same affection for them no matter how they look or what they do.

Also, mothers must have faith in themselves so as to instill security in children.

Mrs. Lee is on leave from her job as associate professor of anthropology at Vassar College. And her European accent is peppered with college girl slang.

Speaking of her temporary job in Washington she says "I'm just a 'gadfly' trying to make these people remember that there are all kinds of children in the world."

Auntie Destroyed Her Spring Tonic When She Learned What Was in It; Anne Comes to Rescue With Recipe

SPRING, spring, spring! It's here again! And nothing could reflect it more surely than the questions sprouting out of the mailbox. For instance:

DEAR ANNE:

I should like a recipe for dandelion wine. Years ago, an aunt of mine made a concoction from dandelions which she called "Spring tonic." On being convinced it was nothing more or less than wine, she destroyed the batch she had in the making and never made any more! And I am sure she destroyed the recipe—at least, I wouldn't presume to ask her for it. Can you help me? A. F., Washington.

To help suffering humanity guard against spring fever, we reprint the following from Peggy Hutchinson's "Homemade Wine Secrets":

DANDELION WINE

1 gallon dandelion flower petals	1 lemon
1 gallon boiling water	1 orange
3 pounds sugar	1 in. whole ginger

½ ounce yeast on a slice of toast

Wash dandelion flowers well as they are always gritty. Cover with boiling water. Let stand three days, stirring often, before squeezing flowers out.

Put liquid in pan. Add thinly pared rind of lemon and orange, sugar, well-bruised ginger, and sliced lemon and orange. Boil for 30 minutes. Let cool.

Spread yeast on toast and float in liquid. Ferment for six days, then strain. Bottle and cork loosely until all fermentation ceases.

DEAR ANNE:

Last year, I painted the concrete floor of our basement recreation room but the paint has all almost peeled off. This spring, I plan to try painting again and wonder if there is any solution I should use on the concrete to insure the paint sticking better this time. G. W.

If the concrete was brand, spanking new when you painted it before, the trouble may have been that the free lime in it destroyed the paint oils. In new cement, this can be neutralized by soaking with a solution of zinc sulphate, but after a year of weathering such treatment should not be necessary.

As to this spring's painting: You might use concrete or masonry paint this time. These come as powder to be mixed with water and being without oil, are not affected by lime. All trace of old oil paint should be removed before these are applied. They come in many colors, sometimes combined with waterproofer.

If you use house paint, be sure to get a good quality. The first coat should be a mixture of one third paint, one third good spar varnish, and one third turpentine. Brush in thoroughly and spread in continuous coat. Thin second coat with 1 pint turpentine to gallon of paint, and apply third just as it comes from can.

DEAR ANNE:

I wish to paste a cut-out wallpaper design to a window-shade and wonder what sort of adhesive to use so the shade will remain flexible enough to roll up. The design would probably extend no higher than a foot from bottom of shade. Can you also suggest a lacquer to apply over the design to make it soil resistant.

MRS. R. T. ROLLO,
2741 Brandywine st. nw.

For flexibility, there's no adhesive like rubber cement. However, for the project you describe, one big disadvantage to this substance is that it tends to turn black as it dries, and unless applied very carefully under the darker parts of your cut-out only, might show through both shade and wallpaper when hit by a strong light from behind. Also, it dries out with age and the designs might loosen.

For a soil resistant finish, lacquer probably won't do the trick, since it is the most brittle of all the available clear paints. None of the furniture finishes are really flexible, but you might get best results from one of the plastic "wipe-on" products which are available in the housewares department of most department stores, under various trade names.

The wipe-on might also be used as an adhesive. Spread a thin coat over the area to be covered by the cut-out, press the paper in place, and let set; then cover the whole shade, cut-out and all.

In spite of all precautions, you may get an effect of crackle glaze if your shade is rolled up and down constantly. The best safeguard against this is to keep both the adhesive and finishing coat as thin as possible.

DEAR ANNE:

One on the Aisle—
'Woman's Picture' Overdoes It a Bit

By Richard L. Coe

"PAID IN FULL," at the Warner, is evidently what they call "a woman's picture" (the assumption being no man could bear it), and it raises the general question of how the movies usually treat women.

In the usual movie a woman toils not, neither does she spin. Oh, yes, women have jobs in the movies but they cause them little fatigue and certainly no disarrangement of coiffure.

If they are single ladies, living on salaries which in real life are scaled lower than men, they nonetheless achieve miracles as to housing and clothing. Their apartments have handsome paintings, expensive furniture, well-equipped bars, the latest in kitchens, fine carpets (wall to wall) and they never seem concerned about meeting payments for either the rent or furniture installments.

And behind sliding closet doors a fresh wardrobe awaits madame for each day of the week. To wear these clothes, Woman has the energy to work all day and visit the glossier dance spots in the evening. And there is always a man with a car and luck in finding parking places.

But what must be even more galling to most women is the mental outlook of the movie Woman. She may be immensely successful in her career, but she always yearns only for a husband and baby. If she is a really Noble Woman, she yearns for babies. Movie Women never even finish a conversation, they never discuss anything except Love and Clothes and they behave with the sense generally associated with Hottentot rabbits.

"PAID IN FULL." Paramount release produced by Hal B. Wallis. Screen play by Robert Blees and Charles Schnee, suggested by a magazine story by Frederic M. Loomis. Photographed by Leo Tover. Music by Victor Young. Directed by William Dieterle. At the Warner.

Such women abound in "Paid in Full." Lizabeth Scott switches her usual Woman from the predatory type to High Nobility. She has brought up her younger sister, Diana Lynn, after the death of their mother, who, we learn, was too weak physically to have children, a hereditary trait, we are informed, which both daughters must face when thinking of having children of their own.

Lizabeth is an advertising artist in a department store, Robert Cummings her boss. Robert gets along just grand with Lizabeth, but Diana brings out the dew in his eyes. During the ceremony, which unites Diana and Robert, Liz makes believe she's taking the vows.

All along, though, we know that Diana is a pleasure-mad little trollop, and when she does have Robert's child, it's hers, hers, hers, and Daddy can be as surprised as he likes when she sneaks off to a lawyer friend to find out divorce laws. Lizabeth consoles him, evidently platonically, but when Diana walks in on them at breakfast she knows her baby will always be hers, hers, hers. At which Lizabeth rushes out to her car and backs over the toddling bone of contention.

After the child's funeral comes divorce and a mental treatment for Diana. Liz and Bob get married and Liz risks her life giving him another child. Diana gets cured, and after the birth of Liz's wee one (a strikingly realistic scene, this, quite at variance with the film's tone) Liz insists that Bob and Diana try marriage again and take with them the child she has just produced. Then she dies.

The script of Robert Blees and Charles Schnee was "suggested by" a Reader's Digest true-life story, a credit line that has little to do with the production Hal Wallis has given "Paid in Full."

Eve Arden is on hand to bring life to a tritely written role, but I should think any self-respecting woman would cringe at this latest delineation of Woman, poor, frail nitwit, to come from the dream merchants.

THAT OFFENDING torture scene in the "Guilty of Treason" trailer that accompanies each showing of "Cinderella" at Keith's, has been boldly snipped out by Manager Hardie Meakin . . . Strictly speaking, there was nothing he could officially do about the company's advance advertisement, but Washington parents will no doubt admire this taking of the nettle into his own hands . . . Even if your bosses may not like it, Mr. M., your regular trade, mindful of their children, will be gratified, and that's the way to make friends for the movies.

THE AIRPORT drive-in auto theater opens tonight with "The Three Musketeers" and "Tension" as its first bill and "Adam's Rib" next, opening a three-night run Sunday . . . Making it the second of our trio to come back to life, Sidney Lust's Beltsville drive-in having opened for the season last Saturday night.

JUST BEFORE the Airport's announcement, came word of the opening of E. M. Loew's drive-in on the Richmond Highway . . . This is set for Easter Day, before which time tremendous changes will have been wrought by Manager Don King . . . He's boasting of an adjoining children's playground — merry-go-round, ponies and sand box—as well as something new in drive-ins, "The Moonlight Tower," a 75-foot high pitch of floodlights which will mean the soft, romantic glow of artificial moonlight every night, rain or shine . . . Wonderful!

THE PIX is booming with its double-barreled revival of two Italian favorites: "Paisan" and "Open City." . . . Both are the cream of Italy's postwar crop, with "Paisan" entered in last night's Academy Award finales . . . They'll stay through the weekend.

TONIGHT the new dramatic group of All Souls' Unitarian Church repeats its bill of three one-act plays under the direction of John B. Wentworth, who directed the One-Act Play Tournament's prize-winning "Jinxed." . . . The All Souls' Actors Group, with 100 in its first membership, is playing in Pierce Hall, 15th and Harvard sts., and the curtain goes up at 8:30 on: Florence Ryerson's "A Cup of Tea," Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Two Slatterns and a King" and John Kirkpatrick's "Sleeping Dogs."

ANOTHER church group, the Guild Hall of Calvary Methodist Church, will present Charles Rann Kennedy's "A Servant in the House" tonight in the guild hall, 1459 Columbia rd. . . . Jean Callovini and Ray Swann head the cast, with an 8 o'clock curtain time.

Bucolic Movie About a Man Anr Five Kids Has Charm

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

THERE'S a rich, nutritious movie at the Metropolitan called "Father Is a Bachelor" (no connection with "The Bachelor Father," of happy memory). It's about a wanderer who comes into a batch of children named January, February, March, April and May, and decides to do for them. This is preposterous on the face of it.

"FATHER IS A BACHELOR." Columbia release produced by S. Sylvan Simon. Screen play by Aleen Leslie and James Edward Grant. Photographed by Burnett Guffey. Music by Arthur Morton. Directed by Norman Foster and Abby Berlin. At the Metropolitan.

THE CAST

Johnny Rutledge	William Holden
Prudence Millett	Coleen Gray
May Chalotte	Mary Jane Saunders
Prof. Mordecai Ford	Charles Winninger
Pudge Barnham	Stuart Erwin
Plato Cassin	Clinton Sundberg
Jan Chalotte	Gary Gray
Feb Chalotte	Billy Gray
Jericho Schlosser	Sig Ruman
Judge Millett	Lloyd Corrigan
Jeffery Gilland, Sr.	Frederic Tozere
Genevieve Cassin	Peggy Converse
Adelaide Cassin	Lillian Bronson
Lucius Staley	Arthur Space
March	Warren Farlow
April	Wayne Farlow
Jeffery Gilland, Jr.	Tommy Ivo
Flanegan	Frank Worden

The movie comes off very nicely, however, thanks principally to Aleen Leslie and James Edward Grant, who wrote it, and to Norman Foster and Abby Berlin, who directed. Some of the performances also are more than acceptable, notably those of all five children, of Charles Winninger, Clinton Sundberg and Coleen Gray.

The story probably would provide an adequate answer to the bromidic, "How bucolic can you get?" Nonetheless, it is done with charm and a neat wit, and the producers have had commendable impatience with any overtones or banalities.

William Holden, as the man with all the children, gets into and out of more jams than you'd care to have me detail here. I found him only adequate and kept wishing he carried a little more of what we used to call "it," if we apply the term to the denser sex. Holden is called upon to sing every now and then and some of the tunes are lilty folk songs handled so easily by Burl Ives. I kept thinking, for that matter, that this movie might have been built for Ives. Holden is earnest and thoughtful about it all and his performance is by no means one to detract from the tone of the picture.

Miss Gray, as the heart interest, hasn't much to do, but she's very charming. Mary Jane Saunders is the same very very cute little girl she was in "Sorrowful Jones," but I'm partial, of course, to babies named Mary Jane.

Also at the Met is a short in which Cecil B. DeMille gives you to understand that the movies are a fine thing. There's also another full-length feature there entitled "The Palomino." From what I could gather in a few minutes' scrutiny, it's about a Technicolor palomino horse named King.

This Kid Is a Has-Been At the Age of 3

Baby Brother, aged 3, strolled in. Chomping a mouthful of gum, he surveyed the visitor dispassionately. "Ah," said our young man brightly, "I see you have some gum. Can you blow bubbles with it?"

"Uh uh," replied Baby Brother. "I usta could when I was littler, but I can't any more."

TOO LATE

There have been several blasts from the Senate side of the Hill recently, on the subject of Ingrid Whatsername.

One quote was to the effect that Ingrid ought to be kept off the American radio and television frequencies.

Promptly there went forth a letter from Paul Porter, former Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, to Wayne Coy, present head of the FCC.

Porter noted that if checking up on Miss Bergman's activities is to become part of the FCC's duties, he wished he had his old job back.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Medium-sized, housebroken dog, makes friends very easily. We're moving into apartment." (Lincoln 3-8412.)

"Friendly 5-month-old male hound." (Wisconsin 8221.)

LOOK WHO'S BACK; IT'S THAT FISHER FELLER

G. A. Fisher of 1442 Spring rd. nw., clips and forwards a picture from Council Bluffs, Iowa, where a 13-year-old lad has made pets of a cat and a rat.

The picture shows that the cat and rat are such good friends that they even pose together for the photographer—with the rat perched contentedly on the cat's back. Rhymster Fisher philosophically observes:

In pictures such as this,
That even folks like Dean and Joe
Are much inclined to miss.

I may be called a dreamer
But still believe it's true;
If cat and rat can be at peace
By golly! Folks can, too.

MISCELLANY

Nine times out of 10, people who send in stories about bright sayings of their children forget to mention the child's name . . . Bruce R. Morris of 'way up in Amherst, Mass., says we can forget about all other signs of spring; what counts is that the sap buckets are out on the maple trees . . . Albert R. Doyle of RFD 1, Alexandria, Va., adds: "And besides, you were a month late with your first robin story. I saw one at Fort Hunt, Va., on February 3" . . . Bowie has opened the local racing season for so many years that I can't help but wonder how many old timers will show up there this Saturday out of sheer force of habit (instead of reporting for duty at the $2 windows at Laurel) . . . A headline on a recent story about this paper's sewing contest read: "As You Sew, So Shall You Reap." Mrs. Christopher C. Foley of 3200 16th st. nw. quips: "Your headline writer might also have made it, "'As You Sew, So Shall You Rip'" . . . Believe it or not, one of the boys in our composing room spotted a "Pied Type" item on an automobile nameplate the other day. The thing actually read "Olbsmobile," and goodness only knows how many of them got out of the factory that way . . . Mrs. Elsie C. Draper of 1334 Lewis st. ne. tells me she's very pleased with the brooms and brushes she's been getting at the stand at 484 L st. nw. (Center Market) operated by the District Sales Service for the Blind. Mrs. Draper reports that the hand-made items of the blind craftsmen are consistently superior to ready-mades. The stand also stocks rugs, mats, mops, clothes bags, purses, belts and billfolds. . Why not give 'em a try? . . . If they don't hurry up and get Steve Canyon safely back on the ground again, I'm not going to have a fingernail to my name.

SHOP TALK

The next day, 11 of Andy's conscience-stricken colleagues returned paste pots to her.

TWIN BILL

Russell Roller of 7135 Chestnut st. nw. reports what is undoubtedly the most colorful double feature of the season. The Stanton theater recently offered:

"The Purple Heart," "Red, Hot and Blue."

ADD DEFINITIONS

Mrs. S. L. Silverman of 4045 Ely pl. se. suggests that inasmuch as we're resurrecting some classic definitions, we might as well trot out the old favorite:

"Love—first you sink in his arms; then you wind up with your arms in the sink."

JAY ST.

Maxine Boyd of 5405 Dix st. ne. has an answer to a recent poem by Pop Grey. She writes:

You say, "We have no J st. here,
No X or Y or Z."
But there's a Jay, spelled jay aye why,
Come out Northeast and see.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Bernice M. Willey of Lanham, Md., wonders whether we've heard about the fellow who went to see a doctor about his poor digestion and got the advice:

"It's not what you're eating that's causing your trouble; it's what's eating you."

Post Newsman Will Attend N. Y. Seminar

John A. Singerhoff, assistant city editor of The Washington Post, will attend the fourth two-week "Seminar of City Editors" sponsored by the American Press Institute at Columbia University, New York. The sessions begin Monday.

Singerhoff

Singerhoff, a member of The Washington Post staff since 1933, will be among 15 newspapermen at the seminar. The subjects will range from organization of newspaper staffs to clinical analyses of news in members' papers.

Special sessions will also be held in coverage of departmental news such as municipal government, labor, business, politics, education, religion, police and crime.

A native of Baltimore, Singerhoff is a graduate of St. John's College, Washington, and also attended George Washington and Columbus Universities.

He began his career on The Washington Post as a copy boy. He covered police, general assignments, the courts and the District Building, before being made an assistant city editor in 1945.

During the war, Singerhoff was a correspondent in Africa and Italy for the War Shipping Administration and sailed as a purser in the merchant marine.

Married and the father of one daughter, he lives at 6608 Exeter rd., Bethesda.

Bradley's 'War' Views Revealed

By Drew Pearson

The chances of war with Russia were summed up the other day by the Nation's No. 1 soldier, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Gen. Bradley.

He gave his views behind closed doors to a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, but afterward, Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma rushed out and told reporters that Bradley wasn't worried about war with Russia.

Senator Homer Ferguson, Michigan Republican, started the discussion by inquiring: "Generally speaking, you are up here supporting a 13-billion-dollar budget. I gather from the testimony that you don't think this is a hot-war budget."

"No," agreed General Bradley. "If I hought there was going to be a hot war, I would be up here asking for 30 billion or 40 billion dollars."

"It obviously isn't a peacetime budget," persisted the Senator. "If we knew it was going to be peaceful, we certainly wouldn't request this amount of money," Bradley admitted.

"In other words, this is a cold-war budget," suggested Ferguson.

Again Bradley assented.

Then Ferguson, measuring his words carefully, inquired: "You will probably want to answer this question off the record. In your opinion, what is the likelihood of the ideological clash between communism and capitalism coming to a show of arms?"

"Yes, I agree that this question should be answered off the record, and I will be glad to give you my opinion," offered Bradley.

The official reporter was ordered to stop taking notes—even though the meeting was already closed and the press had been excluded. With this double guarantee of secrecy, Bradley went on to explain that he was not speaking for the Joint Chiefs of Staff but only giving his personal views.

He suggested first, that the "Russians would likely want to increase their industrial potential and improve their industrial situation," and, second, "They would certainly want to have a stockpile of atomic bombs" before precipitating a war.

This "ought to give us about two years before there is any threat," Bradley predicted.

"However," he warned solemnly, "you know the Russians are like hometown bullies, and there is always the ever-present possibility that they will push somebody off the sidewalk once too often, or they will push two or three off the sidewalk, and there will be a war that even they didn't count on starting . . .

"Beyond the next two or three years," General Bradley added, "I don't think there is anyone who can forecast accurately what the Russians intend to do."

Bible-Quoting Bob

The more you see of likable, Bible-Quoting Bob Kerr, the more you realize he is no novice from the bush leagues of Oklahoma, but one of the smartest Senators ever to come from that State. He is particularly smart at looking out for Bob Kerr.

Not only has smiling Bob kept the Senate in a turmoil over his Kerr bill, expected to increase the cost of natural gas to Northern cities—and increase his own gas profits. Not only is he appointing a big oil company attorney, W. R. Wallace of Magnolia-Socony-Vacuum to the Federal Court. But in addition Kerr may profit from an Oklahoma highway to be financed by the RFC by selling it "black-top" from the Kerr-McGee Co.

Furthermore, Senator Kerr has placed his brother, Aubrey Kerr, in a key spot as Oklahoma counsel to the RFC, where he passes upon RFC matters affecting the State of Oklahoma.

The Oklahoma toll road to which Senator Kerr's company hopes to sell an asphalt mix called "Black-top" would run from Oklahoma City to Tulsa. Application has been made to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. for a $35,500,000 loan, which would be the full cost of the road. But the RFC has countered with the proposal that the local road authority put up five to six millions.

If the road is built of concrete it would last longer but be more expensive. If built of Senator Kerr's "black-top" it would be cheaper but get torn up much quicker.

L. G. May of the Kerr-McGee Co., when queried by phone at Wynnewood, Okla., said that the company was bidding on the road but didn't have the contract yet.

Incidentally, Senator Kerr is a fast worker. He got his brother appointed counsel for the RFC in Oklahoma one month after he entered the United States Senate.

NOTE—Senator Kerr's oil and gas holdings are valued at around 100 million dollars. In view of this, Senators are wondering whether Kerr will vote on his natural gas bill. According to Rule 12 of the Senate, a Senator who has a direct, pecuniary interest in a bill should, by precedent, disbar himself from voting.
